

WILL PROBE OHIO PEN DELIVERY

FEDERAL PROHIBITION SHAKE-UP IMPENDING

REDISTRICTING OF TERRITORY WILL BE DISCUSSED AT MEET

Ohio Enforcement Officials Attend Andrews' Call

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Another federal prohibition shake-up was impending today when administrators from Eastern and Southern states met with General L. C. Andrews, dry chief, to discuss a general redistricting of this section.

Represented at the meeting were Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Whether the creation of new districts will result in personnel changes was not disclosed.

Unsatisfactory enforcement results are understood to be responsible for calling the conference. Andrews planned to try for a more effective program by changing several of the district boundaries.

With districts laid out as at present, the treasury feels that the best results can not be obtained. While no decision has been reached as to the new districts, it was understood changes would be made in the North and South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Within the section to be surveyed are a number of specific problems, including smuggling, alcohol diversions, brewery leaks and moonshining. Under the proposed plan, the redistricting would be made along problem lines rather than following federal judicial districts, state boundaries or geographical divisions.

The Detroit sector is regarded as one of the most difficult on the Canadian border and emergency methods to tighten up have been recommended.

Among the dry executives attending the conference were M. O. Dunning, collector of customs at Savannah and dry co-ordinator for the Southeast; and the following administrators: J. D. Pennington, of Pittsburgh; T. J. Cavanaugh, of Philadelphia; R. A. Fuiweller, for Virginia and West Virginia; B. C. Sharp, for North and South Carolina and Georgia; a representative of E. L. Porterfield, for Ohio and Michigan; Edward Budnitz, for Maryland, District of Columbia and Delaware; and Herbert H. White, former Oklahoma and Texas administrator, who will be assigned to an Eastern district.

Other officials attending the conference were: Ira L. Reeves, deputy administrator for New Jersey, who is slated to be administrator of the independent New Jersey district; W. H. Walker, Columbus, deputy administrator for Ohio; and J. H. Hanlon, zone director at Detroit.

PAIR RELEASED OF KIDNAPING CHARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 9.—Edmond Straincham, 23, and his wife, Martha, 21, Los Angeles, Calif., have been released here in connection with the reported kidnapping of a 17-year-old adopted daughter of a wealthy Canton, O., family, Lieutenant Kirgan, of the detective bureau, said today.

According to the officer, the girl, whose name was not revealed, had answered an ad for magazine solicitors, who came here with a group of others to participate in a house-to-house sale campaign.

There were no illegal practices connected with the case, the officer declared.

The girl has been returned to her foster parents.

DISPUTE OVER FIVE DOLLARS IS FATAL

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Julius Boyer, 29, was dead here today and Coroner J. F. Lawrence was holding Albert Carpenter, 36, brother of Rev. Ralph Carpenter, who at present is conducting an evangelistic revival at Eastman, Ga., as the result of a quarrel over a five-dollar debt. Boyer's jugular vein was severed by a knife, according to police, in the hands of Carpenter.

QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL NEEDS MORE EXITS FOR EJECTED GUESTS

Four Factions Whisper Behind Closed Doors As Intrigue Envelops Royal Entourage—Marie Unaware Of Dissension

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN (IN WYOMING) Nov. 9.—Chaos was king today aboard the royal Roumanian flyer while Queen Marie, apparently unaware of the boiling cauldron of dissension around her, conversed gayly with Governor Nellie Ross, of Wyoming, another striking feminine personality. A royal attack submerged an alarm clock in a bucket of water to stop its ringing early today, which is more easily understood than other events aboard.

Lolie Fuller, aged danseuse and friend of her majesty, together with May Birkhead, her press agent, were continued under the care of the queen's nurse. Miss Birkhead suffered a physical collapse following a grilling by those in charge as to her alleged intrigues. Madame Fuller, sensitive to her aide's distress, found her former illness aggravated.

Colonel John H. Carroll, official host to the queen by virtue of a document and the fact he is representing the railroads, also discovered his health falling under the stress of keeping discipline on the train.

"Miss Birkhead will leave the train as soon as she is well enough to go," declared Colonel Carroll regretfully. If Miss Birkhead's health is not improved, she will be taken to a hospital in Denver, it was said.

The queen is annoyed with Madame Fuller and she will be asked to leave the train at Chicago, asserted an alleged spokesman for her majesty.

"Madame Fuller is my guest and will leave the train only when I ask her to. She will go no farther than Chicago," said Colonel Carroll, incensed over the interest of the alleged spokesmen.

Developments indicated that a queen may be a queen in Roumania but a guest in America is only a guest. Princess Ileana had signified that she would like J. B. Ayres, automobile representative of the Ford company, restored to good standing. Ayres was ejected from the train for an alleged statement that Henry Ford was paying the incidental expenses of the trip.

The youthful automobile salesman, whose breezy personality was enjoyed by her majesty and the princess, emphatically denied making such a statement.

"Ayres will not be allowed back on this train," said Carroll.

While the train sped through the "Wild West" section of America, the queen's entourage was being followed by a band of robbers, who were waiting for the train to stop at a small station, where they intended to

WON'T REWARD 'TACK'S' HEROISM WITH PARDON

Warden Thomas Praises Former Xenian But Says Parole Has Not Been Considered—Says "Tack" Saves Life of Warden's Daughter

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—No attempt will be made to get a pardon or parole for C. W. Latimer, Xenia, former big league baseball player, or William Chatfield, Cincinnati, former state senator and one-time candidate for lieutenant governor, or any of the other prisoners in Ohio State Penitentiary who aided prison officials in trying to prevent the break of thirteen inmates Monday, Governor Donahay and Warden Thomas said today. DEMOCRATS PLAN CAMPAIGN TO SEAT WILSON IN PENNSYLVANIA

Will Oppose Seating of Vare Rather Than Working To Expel Him—Base Claim On Alleged Voting Frauds

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A militant campaign to seat Wm. B. Wilson, Democrat, as the "legally elected" senator from Pennsylvania in the 70th congress has been agreed upon by a group of national Democratic leaders, it was learned here today.

The Democrats expect, and will get, the support of a majority of the Republican insurgents, in all probability. The Democrats and insurgents can control the 70th congress whenever they get together.

A week ago, the Democrats were talking out of denying a seat to Wm. S. Vare, or of expelling him after being seated, because of his expenditures in the Republican primary. If successful, this would create a vacancy which ostensibly would be filled by the appointment of another Republican. But now, after reviewing the election, they have agreed upon the seating of Wilson.

The change in Democratic tactics is due in large measure to the controversy provoked over the constitutional aspects of the question. The constitution provides a senator may be denied his seat by a majority vote but to expel him requires a two-thirds vote.

The Democrats, aided by the counsel of some of the Republican insurgents, have decided to make a fight on the legality of Vare's election on November 2, which would bring the question before the senate as an ordinary contest and thus within the scope of the majority vote.

The city of Philadelphia, which Vare controls politically, will be the focal point of the opposition attack. In the congested wards of the city it will be alleged there were thousands of votes illegally cast for Vare and similarly thousands of votes uncounted on Wilson.

Wilson carried the state of Penn-

"TACKS" LATIMER AIDS IN CAPTURE OF JAIL BREAKERS

C. W. ("Tacks") Latimer, former Xenian and big league ball player, who is serving a life sentence for murder in Ohio State Penitentiary, played one of the heroic roles in the pursuit and capture of thirteen prisoners from the penitentiary, Monday.

Latimer has been a trusty at the institution some time and took a prominent part in the trying to stop the break and then in the subsequent capture. Latimer works on the gate. He continued with the posse of police after the dangerous criminals had escaped.

the building and worked with officers and citizens in the final capture. He is to be recommended for favorable consideration as the result of his act, it is said.

When the escaping prisoners attacked Warden Thomas, guards and office employees, Latimer courted death, placing himself in the line of fire of the prisoners and taking every chance to foil their escape. He was on the stairway on the inside of the house and yelled to Miss Amanda A. Thomas, the warden's daughter, to keep back for fear of her life, meanwhile emptying a .45 calibre revolver at the prisoners. Daniel J. Bonzo, record clerk of the penitentiary, fired at the prisoners from a window. Latimer, who guarded Miss Thomas on the stairway, jumped to the street, boarded a machine driven by Leo A. Curtin, 1404 N. Fourth St., Columbus and followed by Motorcycle Officer Hulls, gave chase.

Lostner, one of the escaping prisoners, is credited with firing the first shot, in the break, sending his bullet direct at Latimer, but the shot went wide of him, returned the fire, before running from the building to join the chase.

Curtin, with Latimer in his machine, kept close to the prisoners' car and Officer Hulls passed them, drew alongside the machine, carrying the prisoners and waved them to one side of the road. He was faced by four automatics and fell back. The prisoners' machine was wrecked near Lilly Chapel, two miles north of London, on the Georgeville Road. Nine men jumped the fence and took refuge in the cornfield. The men were trapped in the field by officers, with exchange of shots. Latimer engaged in the field capture, together with other trusties but was unhurt in the exchange of bullets.

Latimer was vigorous in his commendation of the prisoners. He said the posse would have dealt severely with the men if permitted.

TWELVE PRISONERS RECAPTURED AFTER ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

One Still Missing; Guards And Convicts Bearing Wounds

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—

"There was a violation of the rules of the prison, in that both inside gates were open at the same time while visitors were entering. This, with the crowded condition within the prison, I believe was responsible for yesterday's break," was the opinion expressed today by P. E. Thomas, warden of the Ohio State penitentiary.

"There will be a thorough investigation by us. There will be other investigations. We will find the responsibility, if any is to be placed," he said.

Meanwhile, twelve of the thirteen inmates of the prison, who made the break were in solitary confinement and authorities all over the state were seeking Oliver Glaspy, the lone missing prisoner.

Nursing clubbed heads and many suffering with buckshot wounds inflicted when they made their wild dash for liberty, the dozen men, recaptured after two hours of harassed freedom, today were in their cells.

Not one was in the hospital. Prison officials declared they were not taking the slightest chance of a recurrence of Monday's riot.

WOUNDED ON DUTY

All of the guards who were stabbed or clubbed in the melee in the prison reported for duty early this morning, prepared for the investigation to be made. The men who succeeded in breaking out of the prison yesterday were all members of what is known as the "first K" group—unruly prisoners who bore bad reputations, some of whom had made attempts to escape before.

Warden Thomas did not make an official statement this morning but declared he could not attack any blame on the guards on duty at the time or any other attending of the prison.

"We believe the men had two or three guns besides the knives and clubs flourished by some of them," he said.

"It is a bare possibility some-

VICTIM OF ARSENAL BLAST AWARDED NAVY CROSS AND CITED FOR HEROISM

Corporal Fred J. Rachford, U. S. Marine Corps, who lost his life in the Lake Denmark, N. J., navy arsenal explosion, July 10, 1926, has been cited for bravery by the President of the United States, commended by the Marine Corps commandant and awarded the Navy Cross for bravery.

The medal and citation have been forwarded here to William

Rachford, 325 Cincinnati Ave.,

brother of Corporal Rachford and his nearest surviving relative.

They are proof that the Xenia boy, instead of saving himself when lightning exploded one of the ammunition supply buildings, leaped to the effort to save the arsenal from total loss and died in the attempt.

The navy medal is a bronze cross on blue and white ribbon and includes a color bar. It was awarded in a letter from Curtis

REPUBLICANS HOPE ELECTION OF SMITH TO HURT DEMOCRATS

full of avowed or receptive candidates. Their names, hitherto mentioned more or less covertly, especially where members of the Coolidge administration are concerned are bound henceforward to be discussed with unrestrained freedom. Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, who will not permit his name to be used as a candidate for president, is in the field, is certain to be urged with increasing fervor by his friends. Vice President Dawes, hitherto stubbornly unwilling to be regarded a presidential candidate, may be persuaded to convert himself from a receptive into an avowed aspirant. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, whose ambitions are shared by a legion of admirers, now bounds more conspicuously into the picture.

Former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, has never ceased to be a presidential candidate. Next to Mr. Coolidge, Lowden has more ready-made practical support than any man in the country. He could probably muster delegations from half a dozen states within twenty-four hours of giving the signal. The farming west could easily be set alight in Lowden's interest. His boom was found by this writer to be glowing brightly in numerous sections in the Mississippi valley.

Ex-service men may determine to take a hand in Republican national politics in 1928. Their presidential timber includes Dwight F. Davis, of Missouri, secretary of war, and Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, assistant secretary of war. Each of them can undoubtedly take a favorite-son delegation to the next G. O. P. convention from his own state, if the political water looks fine enough to go into.

G. O. P. OPTIMISTIC

Strange as it may strike the casual observer, Republican leaders are extracting no little sunshine from events of November 2. The election is interpreted as holding out genuine encouragement for 1928. "Al" Smith is to blame for that. As Republicans figure it out, Governor Smith, by his double-barrelled victory in New York, has made himself so dominant a factor in Democratic councils that this time he and his friends will not be denied, as they were denied at Madison Square Garden in 1924. They will insist, it is calculated, on putting "Al" over, no matter if it means the Democratic party from stem to stern. Republicans are confident that a Smith nomination will do exactly that. They welcome the prospect. They are convinced that any Republican of stature—even Coolidge, with the Massachusetts-Butler disaster on record—could overwhelm Smith as the nominee of a faction-torn Democratic party.

Just as the Republican presidential race now threatens to become a wide-open field, so does the ascendancy of "Al" Smith insure a hot Democratic free-for-all. For the most part, the Democratic contest will resolve itself into a bid for Smith's favor, in the event that he finds the nomination, after all, beyond his reach. The late elections make certain that Governor Donahay, of Ohio, and Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, will enter the fray. His new national prestige for some time has assured the entry of Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri. The friends of Alben W. Barkley, Democratic senator-elect from Kentucky, are ready to groom him for first or second place on the next Democratic ticket.

CLAIM SETTLED IN FULL AS ACCIDENT SEQUEL IN COURTS

Application of George R. Wolfe, as administrator of the estate of Ernest Paul Wolfe, deceased, for authority to settle a claim for $10,000 damages against L. C. Aleshire, 1837 W. High St., Springfield, as full satisfaction for parties beneficially entitled to the claim, in connection with the death of Paul Wolfe, 18, has been granted in Probate Court.

Paul Wolfe lost his life in an auto accident at Jacoby's Hill on the Springfield and Xenia Pike, June 17, 1926 for which Christopher Westmoreland, colored, Springfield, employee of Aleshire, was held responsible.

George Wolfe, as administrator of the estate, brought suit against Westmoreland's employer for $10,000, and the case is still pending in Common Pleas Court.

Westmoreland faced a threatened charge of manslaughter but was instead later released.

SEEKING DIVORCE

Charging infidelity, Samuel Morgan has brought suit for divorce from Armetta Morgan in Common Pleas Court. The couple were married September 20, 1920. Plaintiff charges his wife now lives apart from him and refused to return.

EXECUTRIX, EXECUTOR NAMED

Della F. Patterson and Raymond C. Ritenour have been appointed executrix and executor, respectively, of the estate of Joseph H. Ritenour, deceased. In Probate Court J. E. Lewis, Charles Ritenour and J. H. Lackey were named appraisers of the estate.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

William Haines, 232 S. West St., Xenia, laborer, and Goldie May Tobin, 232 S. West St., Xenia, Rev. H. B. McElreath.

CHEST COMMITTEE MEETS WEDNESDAY

Postmaster C. S. Frazer, chairman of the executive committee of Xenia's newly founded Community Chest, has called a meeting of the committee for Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at Frazer's Shoe Store when the goal for the chest campaign this month will be fixed.

Members of the committee will discuss the budgets of the Social Service League and Red Cross representing the estimated needs of these agencies to finance charitable work during the coming fiscal year. It is possible a date for the chest drive may also be set. Chairman Frazer discloses that regardless of what goal is set for the campaign, the drive will probably continue indefinitely until the full amount is subscribed.

TWELVE PRISONERS RECAPTURED AFTER ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

one in the crowd of visitors smuggled in guns and, in the rush, passed the weapons to the prisoners. That all must be investigated.

VISITORS IN PANIC

The break came shortly after the 2 o'clock tour had been formed. Thirty-five visitors had paid their admission and were grouped in the big vestibule. As the first of the outsiders walked through the gate, the thirteen prisoners sprang to the gate.

Visitors were hurled aside. Guard Captain Bennett fell, clubbed. Guard Callahan was attacked and fell before the onslaught. The rushing prisoners reached the street miraculously, according to the prison officials, escaping in a veritable rain of bullets.

Harold Nieringartner of Lima, a lifer, was shot through the head at the door.

Thomas Gerak, serving life for murder, was recaptured just outside the prison.

COMMANDEERED AUTO

Dashing across the street, nine of the men surrounded an automobile driven by Miss Eva Burnside, threw her bodily from the car, climbed aboard and sped away. In this group were Charles Mitcheffer, Columbus, serving life for murder; James Johnson, Cuyahoga County, ten years for burglary; John Nieman, Hamilton County, fifteen years for shooting; Arthur Clayton, Cuyahoga County, fifteen years, shooting to wound; Robert Hunt, Cuyahoga County, life for murder; Frank Proctor, Hamilton County, ten years, burglary; Burton Carter, Darke County, twenty-five years, robbery; Frank Mills, Lucas County, ten years, robbery; George "Jiggs" Lostiener, Cuyahoga County, life for murder.

Johnson was captured near London. He had been slightly wounded by buckshot.

The other eight were surrounded in a cornfield by officials of London and Madison County and Columbus policemen. Hunt was wounded in the leg; Mitcheffer had three fingers shot off; Carter was shot through the shoulder.

Proctor stood behind a shock of corn and emptied an automatic pistol at a policeman and then surrendered.

DEMANDS PROBE

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 9.—"Enough prisoners escape prosecution altogether without letting those who are sent to the penitentiary escape," declared Edward C. Stanton, prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga County, here today announcing that he will demand a break at Columbus.

Stanton pointed out that the alleged ringleader of the plot, "Jiggs" Lostiener, and five other members of the band were former Cleveland crooks who, despite his most earnest efforts to keep them behind the bars, were being "cooked" by prison officials, he charged.

James P. Kirby, county probation officer, and other officials have joined in Stanton's request for the investigation, declaring that lax methods at penal institutions were responsible for the attempted jail delivery.

CHARGE LAXITY

Kirby charged that in one state institution, armed inmates are used as guards over other prisoners and that officials resent all suggestions for bettering conditions.

Judge George P. Baer, who sentenced Lostiener, already has urged that the law be amended to make it a death penalty for murderers to attempt to escape.

to his duty which led him to face danger and death without hesitation. His conduct merits the highest praise.

"Sincerely yours,"

Corporal Rachford, who had enlisted for a new term of service shortly before the disaster, had also just been promoted to corporal. No identification of his remains ever was made but relatives, through a girl friend of the youth, learned that when the first blast occurred and fire broke out in one of the buildings, Rachford manned a hose line and rushed into the building to fight the flames. He was never seen again.

Delegates of the Anti-Cigarette Alliance of America will convene in Columbus, Wednesday of this week, at the Southern Hotel, and several Greene Countyans interested in the movement will attend.

Dr. D. H. Kress, Washington, D. C., prominent platform speaker, will address the convention as will W. J. Hubbard, and W. V. HISTORY OF BLUES FEATURES BANDBOX REVUE NOVEMBER 16

The history of the blues, from their "birth" to the latest innovation of blues melody, will be one of the highlights in "The Bandbox Revue" to be presented at City Hall Theater, November 16 and 17. A complete blues act will be presented, introducing all types of "blues", vocal and instrumental.

Two skits that will intersperse the song and dance numbers of the "Revue" will contain material for an evening's entertainment alone. Characters in one will be taken by Mrs. Jane Bell, Miss Doris Whittington, Miss Alice Foley, Isadore and Arthur Hyman and Lawrence Riddell, and in the other by Miss Helen Ford, Mrs. Harry Williams, John Sutton, Omer Jenkins and "Bill" Horner.

A complete orchestra will be in the pit for the performance, the Harmony Kings furnishing high class accompaniment for the various numbers. Five main choruses featuring the show are hard at work on clever song and dance numbers.

"The Bandbox Revue" was written by Bob Owens and is being produced by Mr. Owens and Elwood Smith, under auspices of the Knights of Pythias Lodge. Tickets can be obtained at the Criterion, Geyer Book Shop, Smith Bakery, K. of P. members, Pantry Grocery, Sohn's Drug Store or from any member of the cast. The plat will open Friday night at 6 o'clock at Sohn's Drug Store. The fifty cent admission fee includes reservations.

SARA M. CHEW MEETS

Members of the Sara M. Chew Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church enjoyed a delightful affair in the church parlors Monday evening when the annual thank-offering meeting was held. A delicious dinner was served at six-thirty and following the dinner the regular program was given.

"Missionary Work Among the Indians" was the subject for the evening. Mrs. George Bickel, who conducted the devotionals, gave the twenty-third Psalm in the Indian sign language. Mrs. Helen Spahr, who had charge of the program, told of the work among the Indian sand showed a chart giving the names and location of all of the Indian missions. A sketch of the work in each mission was given by different members of the Society.

Mrs. George Bickel gave an interesting report of the conference recently held at Marion and Mrs. George Street and Mrs. V. P. Brown also gave interesting points in connection with the conference.

A vocal duet by Mrs. Leigh Bickel and Mrs. Homer Spahr was a feature of the program. The treasurer reported that the thank-offering amounted to thirty-five dollars. The names of four new members were reported to the Society.

FIRST M. E. GLEANERS

ENTERTAINED MONDAY

Members of the November committee proved delightful hostesses to forty-five members of the Gleaner Class, First M. E. Church, at the home of Mrs. Roy Ireland, N. King St., Monday evening. Election of officers was held. Mrs. V. L. Faires was elected president; Mrs. Roy Ireland, vice-president; Mrs. H. C. Pendry, secretary; Miss Clara Marshall, treasurer.

The approach of Armistice Day was brought out in the decorations and entertainment. An impressive little sketch was given with Mrs. Ireland representing a Red Cross nurse; Mrs. Carl Pramer, Uncle Sam; Mrs. Ralph Stevens, the navy; Mrs. Clayton Swartz, the army and Mrs. Clarence Patterson, the Goddess of Liberty. Mrs. A. E. Faulkner followed with a reading. Two patriotic contests were enjoyed, concluding the program.

Mrs. Ireland was assisted by Mrs. Ralph Stevens, Mrs. Clayton Swartz, Mrs. Wilbur Wilson and Mrs. Clarence Patterson.

OLD TOWN COMMUNITY

CLUB ELECTION HELD

Mr. Ovard McCoy was elected president of the Old Town Literary Club, at the first meeting at Old Town School, Friday. Mr. Clark Linkhart was made vice president; Miss Hazel Linkhart, secretary and Mrs. J. W. Swadener, treasurer. Mrs. Wilbert, Mr. David Riley and Mrs. Zimmerman, are members of the new program committee; Mrs. Elbeek, Mrs. Beatty and Mrs. Funk, refreshment committee; Miss Clara McCoy and Mr. Carl Harner, membership.

After the election of officers, an enjoyable evening was spent. Old time fiddlers, furnished the club with music and a playlet was given by three Harner boys. Refreshments were served consisting of gingerbread, cider, and pumpkin pie. The next meeting will be November 26. Everyone is invited.

PLEASANT BIRTHDAY

PARTY GIVEN THURSDAY

Covers were laid for fourteen guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Upton Confer, Thursday evening, honoring their son, Mr. Harry Confer's twenty-fifth birthday. A bounteous three course supper was served. A cake bearing twenty-five pink candles formed an attractive center piece on the table. Mr. Confer who has been confined indoors for some time from illness, received many beautiful presents.

Those who enjoyed the affair were: Miss Rose Ellinger, Miss Esther Miller, Mr. Edward Miller, Mr. and Mrs. George Stanner, all of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Semler and daughter, Martha Jane and son, Chester, Jr., Mr. Chester Confer and Mr. Paul Ricker.

SPRING HILL P-T. A.

MEETS MONDAY AFTERNOON

Pupils of Spring Hill School entertained members of Spring Hill Parent-Teacher Association, with a program Monday afternoon. Fifty-four mothers attended the meeting. Mrs. J. J. Stout of Central P-T. A. extended an invitation to all mothers of the P-T. A. to attend the Silver Tea at the home of Mrs. W. R. Harner, King and Church Sts., November 11, from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Refreshments were served after the program and business meeting.

UNION CLUB MEETS

Union Community Club will meet at the school Friday evening. Each family is requested to bring fruit salad.

Mr. Elton Haines and Miss Rosezella Harner entertained the following guests at a theater party in Dayton Saturday evening: Miss Olive Harner, Mr. Millard Burrell, Miss Mildred Alexander, Mr. Harold Van Pelt, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Harner.

Mr. Finlay M. Torrence, of the Buckeye Press, secretary of the Ohio Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, and Mrs. Torrence, left Saturday for New Orleans, La., to attend the national convention of the American Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, this week. They went on a special train carrying lumber dealers from Ohio and Michigan.

Mrs. Morris Sharp graciously entertained members of Alpha Theta Chapter, Delta Theta Tau Sorority, at her home on E. Market St., Monday evening. After the business a social period was enjoyed and refreshments served.

SOCIAL AND BUSINESS

MEETING AT MCKINLEY

One of the most delightful meetings of the year, under auspices of the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association, was held Monday afternoon at the school when officers and the membership committee, entertained honoring the teachers and the new members.

The membership chairman, Mrs. Richard McClellan reported that there were 100 paid members in the association, more than twice the membership of a year ago. Mrs. E. P. Hamlin gave a graphic and detailed report of the state convention held at Marietta, O., recently.

Miss Dorothy Hamlin favored the meeting with a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Street at the piano.

City Superintendent H. C. Pendry addressed the mothers, on "The Educational System," giving details of the twelve-years' course. His talk was well received by the eighty-five women.

Owing to the resignation of Mrs. Clarence Hatfield, Mrs. L. S. Hyman, was elected secretary of the association. Announcement was made of the need of patronage at the Bijou Theater benefit of the association Friday evening, with matinee and the Armistice Day Silver Tea of the Federated P. T. A., at the home of Mrs. Walter Harner, November 11. Plans were laid for filling Thanksgiving baskets for needy families.

After the program, the guests were asked to remain for a social hour and refreshments. Members of the association join in interest with other school patrons in the fact that W. P. Thompson, former president of the Ohio State University, paid high tribute to the late Edwin B. Cox (city superintendent of Xenia Schools in an address at the Central Ohio Teachers' Association convention in Columbus, last week.

Mrs. David Lewis will be hostess to Obadiah Thimble Club, Thursday afternoon at her home, 209 E. Second St. She will be assisted by Mrs. H. L. Karch.

Mr. R. M. Neeld, Mr. J. H. Whitmer, Mr. J. H. Nagley, Xenia funeral directors, and Mrs. Nagley attended the Quinlet Funeral Directors' Association, No. 10, meeting at Wilmington Monday night. A banquet was served members from Greene, Fayette, Clinton, Warren and Highland Counties, at the Snow Hill Country Club, followed by a program.

Miss Bertha Hyman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hyman, E. Market St., and student at Ohio State University, spent the weekend with her parents. Miss Hyman has the honor of being the only freshman at Ohio State to be chosen a member of an exclusive literary society on the campus.

Regular monthly business meeting of Dorcas Class of First Lutheran Church was recently held at the home of Mrs. Carl F. McElage, Fairground Road. Members discussed the class play to be given early in December entitled "Not A Man In The House."

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Hyman had as their dinner guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Polaski, and daughter, Piqua, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Hyman and family, Waynesville.

APPROVE OFFICERS OF NEW RAILROAD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Officers and directors of the new Chesapeake and Hocking railroad, to be constructed between Gregg and Valley Crossing, O., and which is expected to form eventually a link in the proposed Van Sweringen railroad merger, were approved today by the interstate commerce commission as follows:

Wm. J. Harahan, president; Henry Lohmeyer, assistant secretary; Wm. N. Cott, assistant treasurer; Wm. Michel, chief engineer; and O. P. Van Sweringen, George Cole Scott, Otto Miller, W. J. Lunderbach, George T. Bishop and Wm. J. Harahan, directors.

THREE INJURED AS AUTOS COLLIDE ON WILMINGTON PIKE

Mrs. Luther Starbuck, Mrs. Rorer Fudge and Miss Frances Oglesbee, all of near Xenia, are suffering from severe cuts and bruises and narrowly missed serious injury or death, result of an automobile accident on the Xenia-Wilmington Pike, two miles north of Wilmington, Saturday afternoon.

The automobile in which they were riding was struck by a machine occupied by two young men and a young woman. Samuel W. Beich and Joseph Kimpforts, Antioch College students, and Miss Mildred Klein, of Norwood, were in the other car. Both cars were demolished.

The wreck occurred when the driver of the car occupied by the two men and the girl, attempted to assist the girl from the back seat to the front, while driving with one hand, it is said. He lost control of the car, causing a head-on collision with the car in which the three women were driving in the opposite direction.

Miss Oglesbee was cut about the face. Mrs. Fudge received cuts on her right arm and was severely bruised while Mrs. Starbuck had her foot injured and is walking with the aid of crutches since the accident.

Mrs. Starbuck, Mrs. Fudge and Miss Oglesbee were taken to Kelly Hale Hospital, Wilmington, for treatment. Occupants of the other car did not require medical attention.

WHEN HEADACHY TAKE "CASCARETS" FOR THE BOWELS

To-night! Clean your bowels and end headaches, colds, sour stomach

Get a 10-cent box now. You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

—Adv.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 9.—Six telling blows have been delivered by the state to date in the baffling Hall-Mills murder trial.

It will be a week or ten days before the state will have finished presentation of its case against the wealthy Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her two brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, and not until that time will it be safe to predict whether or not the state's case is strong enough to warrant a conviction.

Thirty-odd witnesses for the state have been heard. About 100 had been subpoenaed. The defense plans to put fifty witnesses, including the three defendants, on the stand. It is conservatively estimated that the trial will last at least two weeks more.

ON COMING BACK

The little boy who kept hitting his head with a hammer explained on inquiry that he did it because he felt so good when he stopped. The little boy had the true philosophy of a vacationist.

About once a year we get a yearning to go away from wherever we are, to be different, to get out of our chosen path of life; and after much preparation and worry about where and how and when to go, we make the break and are gone.

And we are only away a little while when we begin to get restless; we have a new yearning, this time it is to get back, back to the comfortable routine of the years, back to the cozy bed with just the right size pillow, back to the easy chair of the front porch, back to the little nook in the scheme of things as they are; away from the half cooked yet burnt food of the woods, away from the mosquitoes of the summer cottage, away from the knock-kneed nudity of the beaches!

We have a feeling away down in the deep dim recesses of our soul that it's not the going away that helps, it's the coming back.

MOST PROSPEROUS OF ALL

Captain Robert Dollar, of the Dollar steamship lines, has just returned to San Francisco from his third trip around the world in three years. Of course, he does not have to pay for his transportation so it is easier for him to travel than it would be for the most of us. But he seems to make good use of his opportunity, and he brings back word from all along the line that the United States is the most prosperous country in the world. He says that England is in desperate straits, and he lays it principally to the payment of the debt, and to the effect of the coal miner's strike. France is flat on her back, economically, but he says he saw no American feeling as so many have reported. Egypt, he says, is enjoying about the same kind of progress as has characterized her for the past ten years, while Italy, under the control of Mussolini, according to this experienced observer, is in the best condition of any European country. One of the reasons for his success, Capt. Dollar says, is that he is big enough to hold the clubband over the Bolsheviks. In spite of the war in China, which leaders there declare has no end in sight, the national commerce has increased fifteen percent the past two years and the people are doing an increasing business. Rubber and tin prices have produced an era of good business in the Straits Settlements. In the Philippines, he says, it is not the common people who want independence, but only the politicians. However, Capt. Dollar says it is unjust to compare the conditions in the United States with those in other nations of the world. "Here everybody is happy, work is plentiful, everybody is working and we are all enjoying a grand era of prosperity. Other world nations, speaking generally, are not showing the progress and prosperity of this country, although I think there is a change for the better throughout the world," said he.

NOT FAIR TO MARINES

It is likely that the marines will do a good job of guarding the United States mails, now that they have been called to the task, but in the opinion of this paper their summons is to be regarded with mixed emotions. One of gratification that an agency which can act and will act has been called into action, and another of regret that a willing horse should be unduly ridden, simply because of his willingness.

The responsibility of guarding the mails is on the civil and not the military forces. The marines are being asked to substitute for somebody who has fallen down on the job, and it hardly seems fair. Least of all does it seem fair to call one whose record of service is so complete as to performance, as is that of the marines.

Stories such as those coming from Chicago and Herrin, which tell of mobilization of armed gangs and the carrying on of crime as though it were the merest routine of legitimate business, do not tend to excuse the situation under which the marines have been ordered to safeguard the mails.

The substitution of the marines represents the taking over of a function of civil government by the military. If it is necessary in this case, how far will the necessity extend? Will Chicago repeat only the peace when the army marches in upon her? Will Herrin only furnish news of law and order, instead of the reverse, when rifle and bayonet and military challenge are established in control of her affairs?

Fundamentally, the mails are insecure because local law enforcement is insecure, court processes uncertain, punishment doubtful. Men who rob mails begin with lesser offenses, and public toleration passes up these lesser offenses.

The marines have a right to ask local self-government. "Why don't you tend to your own business?"

And that's something civil life is obligated to "tell the marines."

THE PROBLEM

Philosophers will search the great unknown

Seeking a thread of truth to them denied,

While life is rich with charms on every side.

With God, I think, they wish to stand alone.

To snatch and claim His secrets for their own.

But here is beauty, stretching far and wide.

Here on the stream of life all mortals ride.

Where every port of peace is plainly shown.
We come to earth to spend a few brief years.
We must remain until our task's complete.

Then which among us happiest appears,
The good man or the liar and the cheat?

This is our problem. Not what Heaven may give,
But how to find contentment while we live.

TO HEAR SPEAKER

DELAWARE, O., Nov. 9.—Prof. E. D. Dickinson of the law department of the University of Michigan, will speak to the Ohio Wesleyan University student body on December 2nd.

Alas Poor Yorick!

lun, colored, the outgrowth of a slight auto accident on the Springfield and Xenia Pike October 31.

Judge Wright announces that a similar charge against Grover Watlington, also colored, arrested with Baylum, will also be dismissed upon payment of costs. Both men appeared before Judge Wright Monday.

The dismissal was also agreed to by the prosecuting witness in the case since the pair paid for the repair bill incurred as a result of damage to a second machine.

The Theatre

George Kelly, he of "The Show Off" and "Craig's Wife" has another character study on Broadway. Her name is "Daisy Mayme" and she is a kind, canny, ordinary little woman, not as good theatrical material as the Show Off himself, according to The New Yorker.

"She is too likable," The New Yorker continues. "Nor does one laugh with her, for while she is considered a 'scream' by her friends as a humorist, she is merely exactly as funny as a small town life-of-the-party is apt to be." At the same time The New Yorker grants "Daisy Mayme" the top of the comedy season, above every other play, except "Broadway."

"Like all Mr. Kelly's characters, the people in "Daisy Mayme" have many preoccupations. They quarrel and wheedle and love and worry. In fact, they live, and the most satisfying bits of comedy in the play are those which seem dropped inadvertently from Mr. Kelly's prodigious pen. Bits like that in which 'Laura Fenner' the acid sister, tells her daughter to follow the sister upstairs and not leave her alone a minute or she'll start poking around." The New Yorker critic says, "Daisy Mayme" is the pageant of the possessive attitude of married sisters toward a prosperous brother, succeeding in promoting a marriage that might not have happened otherwise.

From notes left by Robert Browning, Arthur Goodrich and Rose A. Palmer have fashioned "Caponsacchi" for Walter Hampden on Broadway.

Cable dispatches from Paris received at the Shubert offices in New York state that when Mlle. Cecile Sorel, who is coming with the Comedie Francaise for a short season of French repertoire, commencing November 29, arrives on the next trip of the Berengaria, she will have her $50,000 worth of gown and "street" ensembles, said to be one of the most elaborate personal wardrobes ever to enter this country.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Mrs. D.: "Some time ago you wrote an article on pillow stuffings. You suggested keeping a hair pillow on hand in case of illness; why not a pine-needle pillow, or one of the pillows filled with fine soft wire which are now on the market? I wonder if we women think enough of the cruelty of plucking feathers or down from live birds? My husband called my attention to the additional cruelty of plucking geese in cold weather."

Answer: I am sure that your letter will interest us all.

Mrs. J. W.: "Can you give me a recipe for the kind of peach cake they sell in bakeries?"

Answer: I am puzzled about the kind of cake you refer to. Do you mean a sort of unsweetened shortcake? Or is it just a white layer cake with a peach filling? I am sorry I cannot help you more, but perhaps some other reader will send it in to us and will also tell us whether it can be made with canned peaches.

Mrs. J. M.: "How can obstinate marks be removed from the windows of an automobile? Also please tell me why I have received no bulletin on canning, although I wrote to Washington for it as you suggested?"

Answer: Try the finest grade of steel wool on the windows, rubbing gently so as not to scratch the glass. Or gritty soaps may be used. You are the second reader who has written to ask me why she has not received Farmer's Bulletin No. 1471 entitled "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," supposed to be sent to anybody free, upon applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Housewife: "My husband works in the mill. How can I fireproof his shirts?"

Answer: Add one ounce of alum or sal ammoniac to the last rinsing water when laundering them. Another way is to soak the garment in a solution of one pound of ammonium phosphate to one gallon of cold water after washing, then dry.

TECUMSEH'S BIRTHPLACE

Tecumseh, the great Shawnee and Miami chief, was born, according to Benjamin Kelley, Tecumseh's adopted brother, who was five years in the Blackfish family, near Xenia on Mr. Sexton's lot near a spring.

Mr. Thomas Hind, who makes the statement that Tecumseh was born on the Sexton farm, states as proof that in the year 1821 he met the Rev. Ben Kelley, then a Baptist minister, and who was taken prisoner the same time as Boone, and had it from his own lips that Kelley was five years in the Blackfish family.

It is said of Tecumseh that at the battle of Tippecanoe he had all the surviving Shawnees in the front ranks for he considered them the bravest of all his men.

EAGLES INITIATE CLASS ARMISTICE DAY WITH PROGRAM

Acting upon a request of M. O. Burns, grand worthy president of the Ohio Fraternal Order of Eagles, Xenia Aerie, No. 1589, will initiate an Armistice Day class of candidates Sunday, November 14 at 2:30 o'clock. It is announced by Secretary Otto Hornick.

A banquet will be served at 5:30 p. m. after which Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy will deliver an Armistice Day address.

The Sunday program will be similar to that which will be carried out by all subordinate Aeries throughout the United States.

The F. O. E. has a splendid war record, having had more than 47,000 members in the army service during the late war. In addition Xenia Aerie claims the distinction of sending more members to the army, considering the size of the local membership, than any other Aerie in the country.

Officers of the order ask each member who has obtained an applicant for the Armistice Day class, to turn in the application by Friday night, November 12.

East Side - West Side

OF
New York
By Jack O'Donnell

The Jolly Roger, that black emblem of piracy, is, figuratively speaking, flying from the mastheads of many crafts in New York Harbor.

Here, where merchantmen from the Seven Seas come to dispose of their precious cargoes, numerous bands of port pirates have a profitable field. They are less picturesque than their ancient brothers, but equally resourceful. Their raids upon the enormous wealth scattered about the harbor take ever changing forms and the warfare between them and the police is waged without armistice.

Much of the harbor piracy is carried on through collusion with crews of ships or dock guards. One of the pirates will get a job on a merchant ship in some foreign port. Arrived in New York Harbor he will communicate with his confederates through a system of signals, advising them when an opportune time comes to make their raid. Having fast gasoline launches the port pirates can work rapidly. They swoop down upon the "prize" unload thousands of dollars worth of valuables and make their escape before the ever vigilant harbor police can come to drive them off.

This winter, when the high price of coal has made the coal-laden barges especially tempting to the modern Captain Kidds have reaped a harvest. Often three or four of these barges are towed about the upper bay just off the Battery by a single tug boat, which of necessity goes far in advance of its tow. The pirates board the last of these barges, unload many tons of "black diamonds" and make their get-away before the crew of the tugboat is aware of the marauders' presence.

It often happens that a single liner will unload millions of dollars worth of portable packages on the docks. If a buccaneer boarded that ship in some foreign port you'd be sure he signals his confederates the right moment to make their raid.

The main obstacle that stands between the pirates and the police is the junkmen. These go about the harbor in boats of various sizes and types, or drive large drays, or shove push carts along the piers. They buy from the pirates and in turn sell to the fences about New York who deal in stolen goods. Who said Long John Silver was but a creature of R. L. S.'s brain?

There's a wholesale and retail meat market on Third Avenue, the chief patrons of which are brokers and bond salesmen who live in Westchester, New York's choicest residential section.

Every evening one may see a line of these wealthy and near-wealthy Westchesterites leaving the market with heavy packages containing a week's supply of meat.

Why do they shop here? Because the meat is fresh and the prices twenty-five to thirty-five per cent lower than in the meat shops of New Rochelle, Larchmont or Rye.

I met Lowell Thomas, the famous traveler and lecturer, at a club shindig recently and he told me he was leaving soon for a trip to the Arctic circle to gather material, pictures and color for more of his lectures.

"Pretty dangerous business, isn't it?" I asked.

"Not as bad as crossing Broadway after the theatre," he answered. And, remembering a taxi cab that had chased me right up on to the sidewalk in front of the Astor Hotel that very night, I agreed with him.

Today's Talk

A BEAUTIFUL FACE

I sat in a hotel lobby in New England just watching and studying folks. This was in a Boston hotel.

The people in Boston are interesting folks. They have Boston personality exactly as you will find that folks in San Francisco or Dallas, Texas, also have a personality all their own.

Well, I sat watching the people come and go in this Boston hotel lobby. A chap sat in a big cushioned chair smoking a cigarette. I wondered what he was thinking about. A strange little couple came in and looked around and then met some friends and they kissed all around. A Japanese traveler rushed in with his camera across his shoulder and a handful of grips. A young girl sat reading a novel. Men stood at the news stand throwing dice for cigars. The manager of the hotel walked across the lobby and gave orders to have the front door closed. People kept lining up to register for the night.

All very ordinary—quite the same as in any hotel any day. But all of a sudden an elderly lady supported by a younger woman walked into the hotel. The elderly lady had one of the most unusual smiles on her face of any I had seen in months. I can still see it so vividly it impresses its beauty upon my brain.

It wasn't just a smile. It was a face radiant, in full beauty—bloom. You could feel the magnetism of the personality behind that beautiful face.

All the rest of the evening, and far into the night, before sleep came, did I feel the influence of that lovely face.

I saw youthful faces of young women pass all evening. Many were very good to look at. But beyond the passing beauty, nothing remained. But here was an elderly lady whose wonderful face remains as something real and vital, weeks after I saw it.

It was the face of a mother. The face of one who had undoubtedly suffered deeply. But I noticed that there was a peculiar silence of reverence as the face passed by. Such a beautiful face.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE OBSERVED HERE

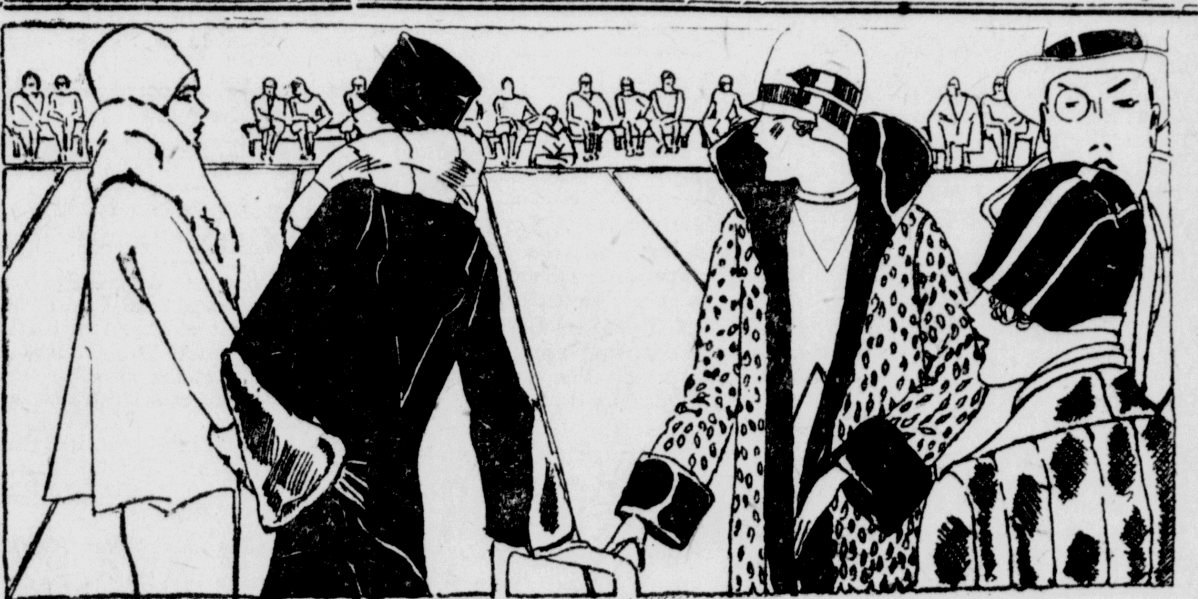

An "Armistice Day" program has been arranged for the student body of Central High School at assembly period Thursday afternoon, November 11 at 1:30 o'clock, according to Principal Spencer Shank.

The Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of First M. E. Church, has consented to address students on a subject in keeping with the occasion. Preliminary exercises will precede the Rev. Mr. Shank's talk.

NOT A VERY EXCITING GAME

Jay V. Jay

The Goofer—he has done this often!—is waiting for Mitzi. Technically he is waiting for Mitzi and Polly and Eleanor, but why be technical? He finds very little to interest him in the fair young things near him—cape coats, wide sleeves, reversible coats notwithstanding. You, yourself, will probably notice that these are smart garments—the first coat is of fabric with a fur collar, the second of seal trimmed with nutria, the third a leopard coat trimmed with seal. End of the first quarter and they haven't come yet!

At the second half the Goofer decided to wait no longer and following up his ticket found the three young ladies—all very reproducible because he is so late. Polly's coat is trimmed with a long collar of fox and wide fox cuffs. Mitzi wears a muskrat coat with a standing collar to keep her ears warm. Eleanor has a seal coat outlined in fabric with a tailored sort of collar. (Hidden by the collar of her dress). "Never mind," Mitzi tells the Goofer. "It hasn't been very exciting. Second half and the score is 0 to 0."

CENTRAL GRIDDERS TO ENGAGE BATH TWP. TEAM HERE FRIDAY

Central High School grid iron huskies will rekindle the fires of old rivalry with Bath Twp. High School's eleven from Osborn in one of the closing games of the season, Friday afternoon at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

HAS WON TWENTY STRAIGHT GAMES

COACH ROBERTSON

Bradley Tech's football team has not been beaten in twenty consecutive games, extending over a period of three years.

In that time only four opponents have scored touchdowns on Robertson's team and last Saturday Bradley held Wabash scoreless when such foes as Minnesota and Purdue could not do so. Bradley has totaled 482 points to its opponents' 36 in those twenty games.

Its opponents have not been set up as a rule. Robertson is recognized as one of the best minor college coaches in this section of the middle west. His special hobby is building a powerful line and he has some ideas along that line that are worth while.

FINDLAY WILL PLAY DEFIANCE; SHOULD WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

BOWLING GREEN, O., Nov. 9.—Findlay should have no trouble in defeating Defiance College at Defiance next Saturday, if it can foretell the outcome of a contest that will be most important in the "Little Ohio" conference.

Bowling Green spilled the contents of the old duff bucket terribly Saturday by trimming Defiance here, 30 to 7. At that time Defiance demonstrated considerable weakness in all departments of the game. It was the last conference game for the locals.

Findlay has defeated Bowling Green, 7 to 6. In the two remaining conference games, Defiance will play Findlay and Bluffton. Two of the conference teams will figure in Armistice Day games, Findlay going to Wilmington and Bowling Green clashing with Capital at Columbus.

Bluffton will play Cedarville next Saturday, while Toledo and Detroit City College will settle their dispute in Michigan. The standing:

Team Won Lost Pct.

Findlay	2	1	.667
Defiance	1	1	.500
Bluffton	1	2	.333

TRUSTEES FOR COUNTY DISTRICT LIBRARY HAVE BEEN APPOINTED

County Commissioners and Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy are announcing their original appointments on the board of trustees for the Greene County District Library, created by popular vote of the people at the November 2 election.

Commissioners have appointed Mrs. P. H. Flynn, Xenia, for the five-year term, Mrs. L. H. Jones, Yellow Springs, for three years and the Rev. L. L. Gray, Jamestown, for two years. Judge Gowdy has selected Mrs. S. O. Hale, Xenia, wife of the city manager, for the four-year term, and the Rev. Mr. Williams, Osborn, for one year.

All appointments were made effective Monday. The board must now organize for the coming year by election of officers.

Management of the library district will be vested in these five district trustees. Under the law two members are appointed by the Common Pleas Court judge and three by County Commissioners.

After the original appointments, all appointments will be for five years and if vacancies are created the unexpired terms will be filled by the same appointing powers.

Trustees will be required to serve without compensation except that any expenses incurred will be paid out of the library fund.

Trustees will have the power of receiving gifts or bequests, disposing of grounds and buildings, constructing buildings, purchasing equipment and maintaining the library.

The board is required to draw up an annual budget of its needs for the ensuing year for presentation to the County Budget Commission, thus placing the library on the yearly tax duplicate from which appropriations are made.

An annual report must also be submitted by the board and the county treasurer will act as custodian of the library funds.

BACK TO THE FARM

The farm is being dressed up in the skirts of winter. The fodder shock has been given a berth under the barn roof. Pumpkins lay in heaping piles near the mangers of the cow stables, ready to be sliced with a corn knife. The turkey gobblers strut proudly about, unaware of his doom.

Binders and mowers are stored in out-of-the-way places useless until another harvest. The hay fork is pulled up lashed taut to the rafters. Sparrows are making their beds in the hay mow. The hired man is receiving bright colored circulars from fur buyers and gazes intently at the latest quotations for skunk and mink. The collie is no longer making his evening stroll to bring home the Herefords. The farmer is forever doing chores.

Days are short. The twilight comes early and deepens quickly into the night. The evening milking is done by the soft glow of a coal oil lantern, hung on a nail in the stable. The supper table is centered by a flickering kerosene lamp.

Then comes the chicken hunt! Roosters and hens that have been sleeping out all summer on limbs of trees are put to bed on proper roosts in the hen house. Cackling and kicking, they are carried away, for winter is at hand and their outside roosts may be covered with snow any night. Then when the wood in the grate begins to pop and throw sparks out on the carpet, the kids get out the corn popper and prepare an evening treat.

It is the time of mince pies and cranberry sauce. The day for cider and fresh spare ribs. The season for sausage stuffing and chestnut hanting. Hail to the gold and crimson of November!

WHO REMEMBERS THIS ONE?

In the barn a little mouse
Ran to and fro
'Till one day it met a kitten,
Now it doesn't go.

It is rumored that Queen Marie's husband wired her to come home and that she paid no attention to his summons, which might lead one to believe that in addition to wearing crown and jewels she also wears the trousers in the royal family so to speak.

Well, Thanksgiving will soon be here. You can be thankful that you don't have to read this column.

Chesapeake and Ohio to acquire control by lease of the Chesapeake and Hocking railroad between Valley Crossing and Gregg, Ohio.

HELEN THORNE $50,000 DAMAGE SUIT LOST IN FEDERAL COURT

An instructed verdict in favor of the defendant was rendered by a federal court jury which heard the $50,000 damage suit of Helen Thorne, as administratrix of the estate of Floyd Thorne, deceased, against The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Dayton Monday afternoon.

Decision favoring the railroad came upon instructions of Federal Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

Helen Thorne brought the damage suit in Greene County Common Pleas Court more than a year ago as a result of the death of her husband, who lost his life when the truck he was driving was demolished by a Pennsylvania freight train at the company's crossing at Selma, O.

The railroad was charged with responsibility for the grade crossing.

As a formality binding him to a promise to pay for the damage, Amos Baumbaster, 1641 E. Fifth St., Dayton, was charged with careless driving and failure to stop after an accident Monday, in connection with a head-on automobile collision on the Dayton Pike Sunday in which Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hamma and children, Louise and Gloria, Yellow Springs, were injured.

Appearing before J. E. Jones, justice of the peace, Baumbaster pleaded not guilty to both charges and his hearing was set for Saturday morning. Total bond was fixed at $1,000 but he was released and the charges will not be pressed if he pays for damage to the Hamma auto, amounting to about $115.

Baumbaster disappeared after creating the collision when he ducked out from a string of cars proceeding toward Dayton and crashed head-on into the Hamma machine causing both autos to go into a ditch.

He was identified Monday by authorities who traced him through the auto license number, and voluntarily appeared in court upon notification.

MOTHER BLAMES HERSELF FOR ESCAPADE OF HER DAUGHTER

Vashti Dale, Noted Authoress, Tells Story As Warning For Other American Parents—This Is Second Installment

While Vashti Dale (Mrs. Charles Nichols) of Rock Island, Ill., was writing advice for other mothers on how to raise their children, her own daughter, over night, became the famous bobbed-haired "bandit" of Rock Island. Of course Beulah isn't a bandit.

Her daughter, Beulah, 16, made bold by hooch, broke into a residence, entered the bedroom of a 75-year-old man, stripped off her clothing, dressed herself in male attire, and started out to see the world as a man. She was arrested in another city, brought back, and paroled to her mother.

Now Vashti Dale, who for many years has been a contributor to magazines and newspapers, has another view of motherhood.

This is the second installment of her story, written for EFS and The Daily Gazette.

By VASHTI DALE

Copyright, 1926 (EFS)

The fathers and mothers of today are not in sympathy with the jazz-mad, liquor-drinking, flapperism and sheikism ideals of our modern youth; and because they are not, they inevitably do one of two things: condemn with uncompromising sternness any and all tendencies of the sort, wherever and whenever encountered, or blindfold themselves to the belief that their own children do not hold such ideas.

In either case they make no attempt to understand the cause back of them.

This does not mean that I approve of, or condemn the hooch-drinking, joyriding, party-petting standards, which represent, to an appalling degree, the idea of a good time that is held by the average young man and young woman of today.

Parental Attitude

Nor does it mean that I approve of the attitude of the average parent who deliberately refuses to use common sense and understanding in dealing with the problem.

There is a cause for such "ideals" and it is your job and my job to find out what that cause is, and remove it.

Can it be removed?

It can—provided we are not too wilfully blind to wake up and shoulder the responsibility which rightfully belongs to us.

This is a fast moving age and our children are part and parcel of it; and if we insist on walking the lock-step of a past century we cannot hope to cope with, much less understand, the thing that confronts us.

No Hypothetical Theory.

I have said that I am not depending on any hypothetical theory for my facts and I am NOT, as I shall prove. Listen:

Sensational "news" of the daring hold up by Beulah Nichols, "bob-haired bandit," was flashed all over the country, and articles under glaring headlines appeared in all the leading dailies. But the scenes that were enacted away from the public eyes, are not known; and it is from these, in their close relationship to what is known, that I shall draw facts.

Why did Beulah Nichols play the part of bandit, don men's clothing and run away from home?

The answer is:

First—Because she was drunk.

Second—Because she feared that, if we, her parents, found her in such a condition she would be allowed but small personal liberty in the future.

And third—Because she was frightened and ashamed and in no condition to reason clearly.

Now, whose fault was it that Beulah became drunk, ran away from home and got herself featured as a daring bandit?

Are There Model Daughters?

And—whose fault would it be if YOUR DAUGHTER did the same thing?

"Oh, but," you protest, "my daughter would never do such a thing; she has had too careful training. She is not that kind of a girl; and, there is a wide difference between my daughter and your daughter."

Stop, please! There is no difference at all between my daughter and your daughter, except the inevitable difference of temperament and possibly of personality.

Right here is where you are blinding yourself, as thousands of parents are blinding themselves today.

I once thought my daughter could not do such a thing. I once thought she had had too careful a training, and that she was different from other girls.

Important Thing Overlooked.

And—I overlooked, as you are overlooking, that one great, big fundamental fact—the fact that Beulah was, is and will remain so for a number of years—J U S T Y O U T H, in whom the Creator has placed a divine urge which may be used as a constructive energy, or as destructive recklessness.

And, if we, the parents, fail to recognize this fact in time, we will pay, and in some instances keep on paying.

Don't you remember the head-long, chaotic urges of your own youth? Were you ever inclined to consider consequences?

Did you not, in your inmost heart cry out: give me life and more life, for I am young and can enjoy, and I want my measure full and running over?

You surely remember these longings.

"But," you say, "I never wanted to do the things which the youth of today wants, and does do. My parents would have driven me from home if I had."

Time Changes.

True. But time passes, and changes take place.

It is our duty to remove a cause that is distorting into evil the ideals of our present age; and it is our duty to apply with fearless hand the X-ray of self-analysis and acknowledge our own shortcomings.

And if we, as parents, would eliminate a menace that is threatening to become a world-tragedy, we must be willing to do our full share.

In her third article, Miss Dale explains how, in her opinion, this may best be accomplished. Read it in tomorrow's Daily Gazette.

MEDICAL STAFF OF HOME TO CONVEENE THERE WEDNESDAY

Twenty-first annual dinner of the Volunteer Medical and Surgical Staff, Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, will be held Wednesday, November 17, at one o'clock at the Home. Invitations to the meeting have been extended members of the staff, their wives and a few invited guests, by Lt. Col. and Mrs. T. E. Andrews.

A number of distinguished guests will attend the meeting and banquet, including Dr. A. C. Buchmeyer, dean of the College of Medicine, University of Cincinnati, who will speak. Another address will be made by Dr. J. E. Griewe, Cincinnati, dean of the staff and distinguished diagnostician, who has just returned from an extended sojourn through Europe, attending leading clinics.

Dr. Graeme Mitchell, of the University of Cincinnati medical department, will also address the medical authorities.

The meeting will convene at the Home hospital, at 11 a. m., and the business meeting will be held there. The Home Board of Trustees is asking as part of the new budget, a state appropriation of $110,000 for the erection of a new hospital and equipment. Discussion of this matter, which was part of the resolutions passed by the body last year, will be an important feature of this year's meeting.

XENIA MASONS TO ATTEND SCOTTISH RITE CONVENTION

Many Xenia Masons expect to attend the four-day celebration by Scottish Rite Masons of their forty-sixth annual reunion at the Dayton Masonic Temple beginning Tuesday afternoon. One hundred and fifteen candidates will be initiated.

Masons from Mansfield, Bucyrus, Camden, Greenville, Waynesville, Troy, New Lebanon, Springfield, etc., are expected to attend.

HONEY LOU

by Beatrice Burton
author of "LOVE BOUND"
and "HER MAN" ETC.

© JOHNSON FEATURES INC., 1926

READ THIS FIRST:

HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary of old "GRUMPY" WALLACK, head of the Wallack Fabric Mills.

"Grumpy" hired Honey Lou not only because she is quick and clever, but because she is pleasant to have around, so he says. Everyone at the place likes Honey Lou, from ANN LUDLOW, the office vamp, to JOE MEADOWS, the shipping clerk. But Honey Lou is half afraid of Joe Meadows, without exactly knowing why.

Young JACK WALLACK comes to work in his father's mills, to learn the business "from the ground floor up." He falls in love with Honey Lou as soon as he sees her, and she with him. But when he asks her to meet him on a street-corner, Honey Lou flatly refuses to do it. And when he drives her home one night and kisses her, Honey Lou slaps his face and gets out of the car. Later he apologizes and they become good friends.

Later, when he meets Honey Lou's gentle well-bred mother and her half-sister, MARGRET MOODY, he realized that she has been as careful as any of the girls of his own world outside the mills. One night Honey Lou meets one of his friends, ANGELA ALLEN, who lives next door to the Wallack family. She feels sure that Angela, whose nickname is "Angel," is in love with Jack, and she is surprised when she asks her to dinner at her house, to celebrate Jack's birthday.

MRS. HUNTLEY, Honey Lou's mother, makes a quaint, gauzy dress for her to wear to the party. Honey Lou looks like a Dresden shepherdess in it. But when she arrives at the Allen house and sees that Angela has on a plain dress and that there are only a half dozen guests, she realizes she is overdressed and queer looking. "I look like a bareback rider in a circus," she says bitterly to Jack Wallack, and hangs back at the door of the living room. Then Angela comes and puts a protecting arm around Honey Lou, and leads her firmly and gently into the roomful of people.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

Most of us are painfully shy about meeting new people, whether we confess it or not.

And Honey Lou Huntley felt exactly as if she were stepping into a cage of lions as she walked across the big, bright, beautiful room that Saturday night.

"Don't let these people ritz you!" she kept saying to herself. "Keep a stiff upper lip, old girl!"

She did keep it stiff. She even managed her wide and sunny smile. But hidden in the folds of her pink home-made dress her hands were like lumps of ice.

There were only three people on the sofa in front of the open fire place—two men, with a girl between them. She was a little, dark, slender girl, all in bright Chinese red. The cigarette holder between her teeth was bright red, too, and so were her lips. She looked like a half-grown flapper, and Honey Lou was surprised when Angela Allen called her "Mrs. Clemens."

The men stood up to be introduced. The tall, sleepy-looking one was named Langdon, and Angela introduced the other as "Donegal." He was not much taller than Honey Lou, herself. He had reckless Irish eyes and a small, black tooth-brush of a mustache. Dapper and devil-may-care. This was Honey Lou's first impression of Timothy Donegal.

"Have a gasper?" he asked, when Honey Lou was sitting beside him on the deeply-cushioned sofa. He held out his cigarette case, and she took one.

"Mrs. Clemens 'leaned forward,' 'Don't light it, Miss Huntley,' she begged in a high little voice, 'or we'll have to sit here and watch you smoke it, and we're just dying to eat.' She looked up at Angela Allen. 'If somebody doesn't give me some food in a minute, I'll get right down and chew up the rugs. I swear I will.'"

"Begin on this one, then!" the man named Donegal cut in with a laugh. He picked up a little Turkish prapier from the table—or at his foot—and tossed it at Mrs. Clemens. It just missed her head. She stooped and threw it back to him.

"Dern you hide, Tim Donegal," she shrieked like a cat, "what are you trying to do, break my face for me?"

Honey Lou gave an inward gasp. Why, this girl was as common as One-Armed Annie at the Wallack mills! Her slang was the same rough-and-ready slang as Ann's, and her face was painted just as Ann's always was, like an Easter egg. Strong perfume came from her clothes, too, when she moved, just as it came from Ann's—in clouds.

"I guess we're all sisters under the skin, after all," she thought comfortably, looking around her. Then her eyes fell on Angela Allen.

She was different. There was no doubt of it.

She wore no paint and Honey Lou made up her mind that she did not have so much as a dusting of powder on her clear white skin. In a year when everybody else went shingled and clipped to the ears, Angela Allen wore her pale gold hair in a soft roll at the base of her head.

She did not smoke. And she sat smiling in her tall chair, looking more like a saint than ever. "I wonder if she really is as good as she looks," Honey Lou said to herself.

A housemaid came into the room with a great silver tray filled with little glasses.

Honey Lou took one of the little glasses and looked down at the pale-orange liquid that sparkled in it.

"What is it?" she asked Tim Donegal, who sat close to her.

He gave her a queer, amused look. "Don't you know?" he asked. "Is it a cocktail?" asked Honey Lou, who had heard of them, but never tasted one.

"Oh, no," he answered. "It couldn't possibly be a cocktail. It must be orange juice. Beautiful, but dumb."

Honey Lou lifted it to her nostrils. It certainly smelled like orangeade. Or fruit punch. "Drink it," said the gay voice beside her. "I'll pep up your appetite."

She drank it. She drank it all. They went into the dining room. The table was aglow with candle light in the middle of a big shadowy room.

Honey Lou had never seen a table like it. Down the center of it was a row of pale-green glass bowls. They stood on a long narrow mirror, and the flowers in them were reflected in glass. "And many a garden by the water blows," she murmured softly to Jack Wallack, as he held her chair for her.

She knew that it was a line of poetry from something she knew—but she couldn't remember what. Her head was going around and around and she seemed to see the room and the people in it through a golden veil. Her eyes, as she turned them to Jack Wallack, were large and luminous in her flushed face.

"I'm as dizzy as an electric fan," she said huskily to him. "Was there anything in that fruit punch we had?"

As if it came from a long way off, she heard his voice: "That wasn't fruit punch. That was a cocktail, and a mighty strong one. I thought you never drank."

Honey Lou shook her head. "I never do," she answered weakly. "I never do," she picked up her soup spoon. It felt very heavy in her hand.

After a long time, Jack spoke to her again:

"You know, Honey Lou, one reason why I'm so strong for you is that you are so decent," he said, and his eyes were serious as he looked at her. "Because you don't drink."

"Don't believe anything he says to you, Miss Huntley," piped up Mrs. Clemens from the other side of the table. "Jack pulls an awfully strong line of bunk. But it doesn't mean anything."

"Shut up, Suzanne," the sleepy-looking man, who sat beside her, said. "Talk to me and leave Romeo and Juliet alone."

Jokes flew back and forth across the table, and easy laughter. Suzanne Clemens got up, while the soup plates were being taken away, and went into a Charleston trance on the polished floor between the dining room and the living room.

The sleepy-looking man sang "All God's chillin' got a shoes," in a sleepy crooning voice. Tim Donegal gave an imitation of a ventriloquist.

Honey Lou sat back and watched it all with eyes that were sparkling and wistful. All this seemed very far away from her desk and her job down at the Wallack mills. Very far away from the flat and mother and Margret.

She could hardly believe that she was here in this great house, among Jack Wallack's friends—a stranger in a strange land.

She looked up at him, and saw that he was looking at her. "I wish we were out of this," he was saying, so low that no one but she could hear him. "I wish we were alone somewhere. Don't you?"

Her eyes half closed drowsily as she nodded her head at him.

After the meal was over she and Tim Donegal started the radio in the sunroom while the other four played cards before the fire.

Honey Lou did not know how to play bridge. She had never so much as touched a playing card in her life.

"Old Jack thought he was going to have you all to his lonesome," Donegal told her with a chuckle, when they were settled in big wicker chairs and the music was all around them. "But Angel jockeyed him into the card game—and old Jack likes cards about the way I like work."

Honey Lou smiled at him lazily. Her head was still swimming. She closed her eyes. When she opened them again, Angela was in the sunroom. She was holding another tray of little glasses in her hands. "Have one?" she asked Honey Lou.

Honey Lou shook her head. "No, thanks, they go to my head, I'm afraid," she said. "I'm not used to them."

Angela shrugged her shoulders. "There are mild. They wouldn't hurt a baby," she said. "Take one."

Honey Lou didn't know how to get out of it. So she took one of the little glasses and drained it. Presently the room began to rock like a ship in a storm. The radio music began to beat in Honey Lou's ear like the sound of a great drum.

She felt sick and hot. She tried to get out of her chair, to go to a window and open it. But she sank back, too sick and faint and dizzy to move.

Then, above the singing in her ears, she heard Angela Allen's voice. It was close at hand.

"Are you sick? Do you want to lie down?" she was asking. And Honey Lou tried to say "Yes."

But she couldn't. She felt as if she were slipping down—down into windy darkness. After an eternity she heard another voice, a low, deep, man's voice—Jack Wallack's.

"What's happened to her, Angel?" it asked.

Then complete silence closed down over Honey Lou. She had, as Suzanne Clemens said, "passed gloriously out of the picture."

And so she did not hear Angela's soft answer.

"Please take her home, Jack," she said, looking at him with her gentle dove-colored eyes. "She's had too much to drink. She must have had seven or eight cocktails, your hard-boiled little friend. I lost count of them after a while."

"She didn't know what they'd do to her. She thought they were fruit punch, poor little kid," Jack answered.

But Angela shook her head with its halo of pale gold hair.

"I told her they were cocktails," she said clearly.

Jack looked at her narrowly. Her eyes were wide and innocent—and he had never known Angela to tell a lie. And so he believed her. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Did Jack believe "Angel" Allen? The answer to that question is in tomorrow's chapter of "Honey Lou."

FEDERAL PROHIBITION SHAKE-UP IMPENDING

REDISTRICTING OF TERRITORY WILL BE DISCUSSED AT MEET

Ohio Enforcement Officials Attend Andrews' Call

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Another federal prohibition shake-up was impending today when administrators from Eastern and Southern states met with General L. C. Andrews, dry chief, to discuss a general redistricting of this section.

Represented at the meeting were Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Whether the creation of new districts will result in personnel changes was not disclosed.

Unsatisfactory enforcement results are understood to be responsible for calling the conference. Andrews planned to try for a more effective program by changing several of the district boundaries.

With districts laid out as at present, the treasury feels that the best results can not be obtained. While no decision has been reached as to the new districts, it was understood that changes would be made in the North and South Carolina-Georgia-Virginia-West Virginia-Eastern Pennsylvania-New Jersey districts and possibly others.

Within the section to be surveyed are a number of specific problems, including smuggling, alcohol diversions, brewery leaks and moonshining. Under the proposed plan, the redistricting would be made along problem lines rather than following federal judicial districts, state boundaries or geographical divisions.

The Detroit sector is regarded as one of the most difficult on the Canadian border, and emergency methods to tighten up have been recommended.

Among the dry executives attending the conference were M. O. Dunning, collector of customs at Savannah and dry co-ordinator for the Southeast, and the following administrators: J. D. Pennington, of Philadelphia; T. J. Cavanaugh, of Philadelphia; R. A. Fuhrer, of Virginia and West Virginia; H. C. Sharp, for North and South Carolina and Georgia; a representative of E. L. Porterfield, for Ohio and Michigan; Edward Budnitz, for Maryland, District of Columbia and Delaware; and Herbert H. White, former Oklahoma and Texas administrator, who will be assigned to an Eastern district.

Other officials attending the conference were:

Ira L. Reeves, deputy administrator for New Jersey, who is slated to be administrator of the independent New Jersey district; W. H. Walker, Columbus, deputy administrator for Ohio; and J. H. Hanlon, zone director at Detroit.

PAIR RELEASED OF KIDNAPING CHARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 9.—Edmond Strampach, 23, and his wife, Martha, 21, Los Angeles, Calif., have been released here in connection with the reported kidnapping of a 17-year-old adopted daughter of a wealthy Canton, O., family, Lieutenant Kirgan, of the detective bureau, said today.

According to the officer, the girl, whose name was not revealed, had answered an ad for magazine solicitors, who came here with a group of others to participate in a house-to-house sale campaign.

There were no illegal practices connected with the case, the officer declared.

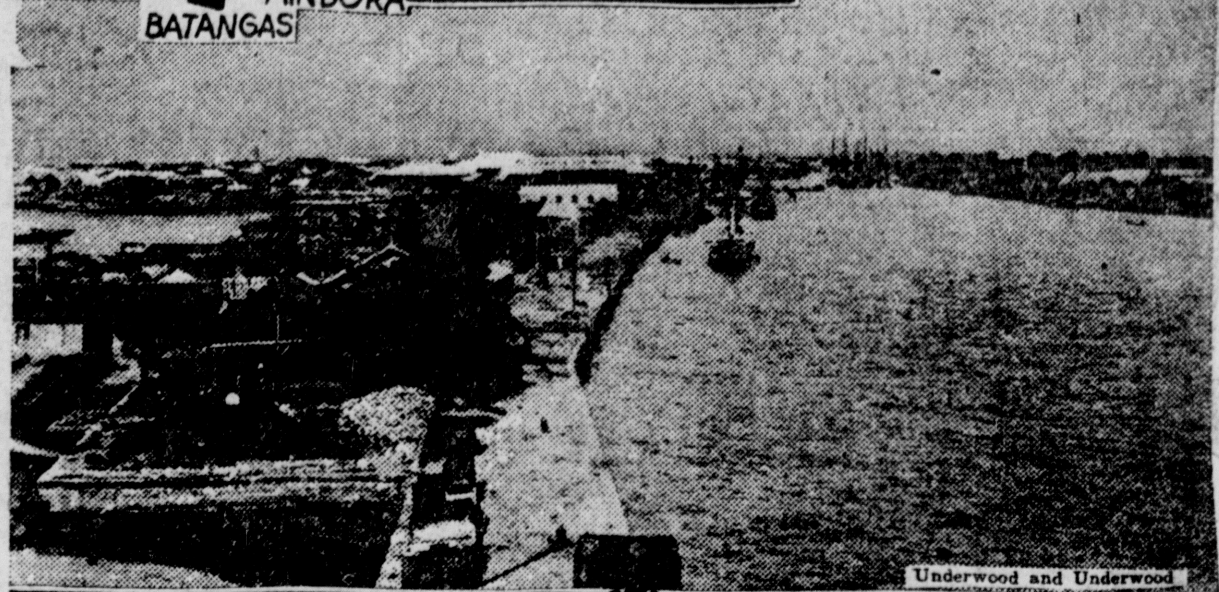

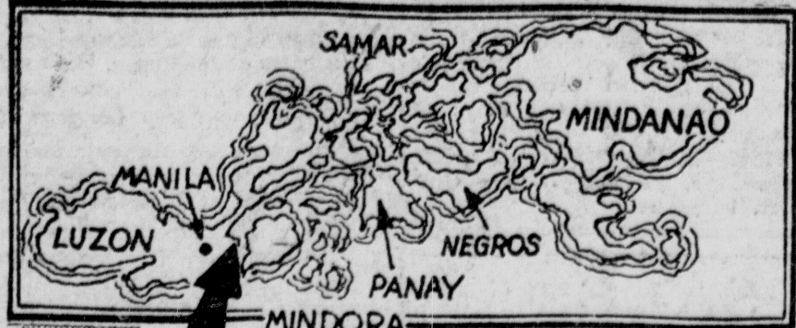

The girl has been returned to her foster parents.

QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL NEEDS MORE EXITS FOR EJECTED GUESTS

Four Factions Whisper Behind Closed Doors As Intrigue Envelops Royal Entourage—Marie Unaware Of Dissension

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN (IN WYOMING) Nov. 9.—Chaos was king today aboard the royal Rumanian flyer while Queen Marie, apparently unaware of the boiling cauldron of dissension around her, conversed gayly with Governor Nellie Ross, of Wyoming, another striking feminine personality. A royal attaché submerged an alarm clock in a bucket of water to stop its ringing early today, which is more easily understood than other events aboard.

Lolie Fuller, aged danseuse and friend of her majesty, together with May Birkhead, her press agent, were continued under the care of the queen's nurse. Miss Birkhead suffered a physical collapse following a grilling by those in charge as to her alleged intrigues. Madame Fuller, sensitive to her aide's distress, found her former illness aggravated.

Colonel John H. Carroll, official host to the queen by virtue of the document and the fact he is representing the railroads, also discovered his health failing under the stress of keeping discipline on the train.

"Miss Birkhead will leave the train as soon as she is well enough to go," declared Colonel Carroll regretfully. If Miss Birkhead's health is not improved, she will be taken to a hospital in Denver, it was said.

The queen is annoyed with Madame Fuller and she will be asked to leave the train at Chicago, asserted an alleged spokesman for her majesty.

"Madame Fuller is my guest and will leave the train only when I ask her to. She will go no farther than Chicago," said Colonel Carroll, incensed over the interest of the alleged spokesman.

Developments indicated that a queen may be a queen in Rumania but a guest in America is only a guest. Princess Ileana had signified that she would like J. H. Ayres, automobile representative of the Ford company, restored to good standing. Ayres was ejected from the train for an alleged statement that Henry Ford was paying the incidental expenses of the trip.

The youthful automobile salesman, whose breezy personality was enjoyed by her majesty and the princess, emphatically denied making such a statement.

"Ayres will not be allowed back on this train," said Carroll.

While the train sped through the "Wild West" section of America.

NEW DEATHS FOUND IN STORM SECTION

MANILA, Nov. 9.—Twenty new deaths from the typhoon that swept through the province of Batangas were reported today as officials penetrated to the isolated town of Lobo, heavily damaged by the storm.

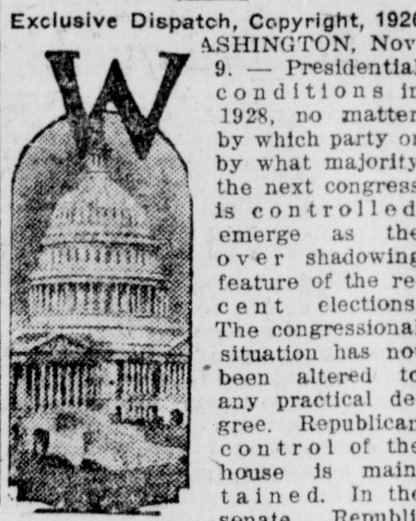

Officials today estimated the typhoon had done damage amounting to $5,000,000. The coconut crop suffered the heaviest damage to it alone being estimated at more than $2,000,000.

Damage to sugar cane was small.

REPUBLICANS HOPE ELECTION OF SMITH TO HURT DEMOCRATS

Many Candidates In G. O. P. Ranks Also May Spring Up

DEFAMATION SUIT NAMES EX-PASTOR

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 9.—Circuit Court Judge Ralph Douglas, sitting in the supreme court, today had before him a defamation suit for $100,000 instituted by Miss Theresa Feltzer, of Akron, O., against the Rev. James Clark, of this city.

Miss Feltzer is a former Bible worker of the Seventh Day Adventist reform movement and the Rev. Clark is a retired preacher of that organization.

According to affidavits filed by Miss Feltzer, the Rev. Clark falsely and maliciously and to injure her as a Bible worker and as an individual, told the congregation of the church on Buchtel Ave., in Akron, in January, 1924, that she was the cause of a divorce between the Rev. J. H. Miller, a minister of the organization, and his wife, by whom she was employed, because of alleged intimacy.

She charges the Rev. Clark said she had made a trip to Detroit with the Rev. Miller.

The Rev. Clark denies the allegations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—William Howard Taft was the best-natured president.

Woodrow Wilson was the kindest.

Warren G. Harding was the best dressed.

Calvin Coolidge saves the most money.

That, at any rate, is the judgment of who has lived in the White House seventeen years and known the chief executives of that period, not as presidents, but as husbands, fathers and just plain human beings.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jaffray, housekeeper during four administrations, is writing her reminiscences, the first of a series appearing in the current issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine.

Mrs. Jaffray also expresses some interesting views on the first ladies she has known. She classes them thus:

Mrs. Taft was the tidiest first lady.

The first Mrs. Wilson was the most motherly.

The second Mrs. Wilson was the most affectionate.

Mrs. Harding had the loveliest clothes.

Mrs. Coolidge is ostensibly the "happiest."

"President Taft loved to serve champagne to his guests," she writes. "In his four years in the White House, I never remember a cocktail served before dinner, but there was rarely a luncheon or dinner without champagne. President Taft, however, was a teetotaler."

"President Taft liked every sort of food with exception of eggs. He just naturally liked food—and lots of it. His great weakness was for beefsteak at breakfast. He wanted a thick, juicy, twelve ounce steak nearly every morning. He would get up at 7 o'clock and for two

Warden Thomas Praises Former Xenian But Says Parole Has Not Been Considered—Says "Tack" Saves Life of Warden's Daughter

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—No attempt will be made to get a pardon or parole for C. W. Latimer, Xenia, former big league baseball player, or William Chatfield, Cincinnati, former state senator and one-time candidate for lieutenant governor, or any of the other prisoners in Ohio State Penitentiary who aided prison officials in trying to prevent the break of thirteen inmates Monday, Governor Donahue and Warden Thomas said today.

"Latimer worked heroically," declared the warden. "He stood by my daughter hurling round after round from his gun at the fleeing men. He probably saved the lives of Guard Cochran and E. J. Landacre, trustee, who was working at the telephone switchboard. He deserves commendation but we are not yet ready to consider anything like that."

Latimer has been seeking a pardon or parole for some time, Warden Thomas said.

He was convicted of first degree murder and is serving a life sentence but his plea was self-defense.

Senator Norris, who campaigned the state for Wilson, said definitely today a legal contest will be filed.

"There must have been some fraud in Philadelphia," said Norris. "There were forty-four districts, for example, in which Wilson did not get a single vote—yet, the election law provides there shall be two or three Democrats on each election board in every precinct. Either the law was not complied with or Wilson's votes were not counted."

"There were forty-four districts, for example, in which Wilson did not get a single vote—yet, the election law provides there shall be two or three Democrats on each election board in every precinct. Either the law was not complied with or Wilson's votes were not counted."

The change in Democratic tactics is due in large measure to the controversy provoked over the constitutional aspects of the question. The constitution provides a senator may be denied his seat by a majority vote but to expel him requires a two-thirds vote.

The Democrats, aided by the counsel of some of the Republican insurgents, have decided to make a fight on the legality of Vare's election on November 2, which would bring the question before the senate as an ordinary contest and then within the scope of the majority vote.

The city of Philadelphia, which Vare controls politically, will be the focal point of the opposition attack. In the congested wards of the city it will be alleged there were thousands of votes illegally cast for Vare and similarly thousands of votes uncounted on Wilson.

Wilson carried the state of Pennsylvania outside of Philadelphia. He came to the Philadelphia County line with a majority of approximately 50,000 votes over his Republican opponent, only to meet there a tidal-wave majority for Vare of approximately 250,000.

Another wholesale jail delivery, said by Sheriff Harley McNabb to have been again headed by Earl Brooks, held on charges of attacking two Columbus school girls, was frustrated Monday when the bars of a half dozen cells were discovered to have been sawed almost in two and five saws were found in Brooks' cell, Sheriff McNabb announced today.

Brooks led an attempt three months ago which resulted in three prisoners escaping. Five others refused to leave because of a storm raging outside. At that time he was said to have been aided by a 14-year-old sweetheart.

McNabb withheld information of the attempt to be made.

VICTIM OF ARSENAL BLAST AWARDED NAVY CROSS AND CITED FOR HEROISM

Corporal Fred J. Rachford, U. S. Marine Corps, who lost his life in the Lake Denmark, N. J., navy arsenal explosion, July 10, 1926, has been cited for bravery by the President of the United States, commended by the Marine Corps commandant and awarded the Navy Cross for bravery.

The medal and citation have been forwarded here to William Rachford, 325 Cincinnati Ave., brother of Corporal Rachford and his nearest surviving relative.

They are proof that the Xenia boy, instead of saving himself when lightning exploded one of the ammunition supply buildings, leaped to the effort to save the arsenal from total loss and died in the attempt.

The navy medal is a bronze cross on blue and white ribbon and includes a color bar. It was awarded in a letter from Curtis

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The first of a series of conferences with congressional leaders was held by President Coolidge around the White House luncheon table today.

He invited seven Republican senators—Smoot, Utah; Curtis, Kansas; Borah, Idaho; Johnson, California; Reed, Pennsylvania; McNary, Oregon and Deneen, Illinois.

It was understood the president planned to discuss particularly his proposal for a 12 1/2 per cent tax rebate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Thirteen armed bandits raided two American ranches Saturday and Sunday near Coyame, Chihuahua, Mexico, American Consul McNulty reported to the state department today.

"TACKS" LATIMER AIDS IN CAPTURE OF JAIL BREAKERS

C. W. ("Tacks") Latimer, former Xenian and big league ball player, who is serving a life sentence for murder in Ohio State Penitentiary, played one of the heroic roles in the pursuit and capture of thirteen prisoners from the penitentiary, Monday.

Latimer has been a trusty at the institution some time and took a prominent part in the trying to stop the break and then in the subsequent capture.

Latimer works on the gate. He continued with the posse of police after the dangerous criminals had escaped the building and worked with officers and citizens in the final capture. He is to be recommended for favorable consideration as the result of his act, it is said.

When the escaping prisoners attacked Warden Thomas, guards and office employees, Latimer courted death, placing himself in the line of fire of the prisoners and taking every chance to foil their escape.

He was on the stairs and on the inside of the house and yelled to Miss Aman, A. Thomas, the warden's daughter, to keep back for fear of her life, meanwhile emptying a .45 calibre revolver at the prisoners. Daniel J. Bonzo, record clerk of the penitentiary, fired at the prisoners from a window.

Latimer, who guarded Miss Thomas on the stairway, jumped to the street, boarded a machine driven by Leo A. Curtin, 1404 N. Fourth St., Columbus and followed by Motorcycle Officer Hulls, gave chase.

Lostner, one of the escaping prisoners, is credited with firing the first shot, in the break, sending his bullet direct at Latimer, but the shot went wild. Latimer returned the fire, before running from the building to join the chase.

Curtin, with Latimer in his machine, kept close to the prisoners' car and Officer Hulls passed them, drew alongside the machine, carrying the prisoners and waved them to one side of the road. He was faced by four automobiles and fell back. The prisoners' machine was wrecked near Lilly Chapel, two miles north of London, on the Georgetown Road.

Nine men jumped the fence and took refuge in the cornfield. The men were trapped in the field by officers, with exchange of shots. Latimer, engaged in the field capture, together with other trusties but was unhurt in the exchange of bullets.

Latimer was vigorous in his commendation of the prisoners. He said the posesses would have dealt severely with the men if permitted.

TWELVE PRISONERS RECAPTURED AFTER ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

One Still Missing; Guards And Convicts Bearing Wounds

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—"There was a violation of the rules of the prison, in that both inside gates were open at the same time while visitors were entering. This, with the crowded condition within the prison, I believe was responsible for yesterday's break," was the opinion expressed today by P. E. Thomas, warden of the Ohio State penitentiary.

"There will be a thorough investigation by us. There will be other investigations. We will find the responsibility, if any is to be placed," he said.

Meanwhile, twelve of the thirteen inmates of the prison, who made the break were in solitary confinement and authorities all over the state were seeking Oliver Glaspy, the lone missing prisoner.

Nursing clubbed heads and many suffering with buckshot wounds inflicted when they made their wild dash for liberty, the dozen men, recaptured after two hours of harassed freedom, today were in their cells. Not one was in the hospital. Prison officials declared they were not taking the slightest chance of a recurrence of Monday's riot.

Warden P. E. Thomas will make a formal report to the governor, probably sometime today.

full of avowed or receptive candidates. Their names, hitherto mentioned more or less covertly, especially where members of the Coolidge administration are concerned are bound henceforward to be discussed with unrestrained freedom. Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, who will not permit his name to be used as long as the president, is in the field, is certain to be urged with increasing fervor by his friends. Vice President Dawes, hitherto stubbornly unwilling to be regarded a presidential candidate, may be persuaded to convert himself from a receptive into an avowed aspirant. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, whose ambitions are shared by a legion of admirers, now bounds more conspicuously into the picture.

Former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, has never ceased to be a presidential candidate. Next to Mr. Coolidge, Lowden has made the most ready-made political support than any man in the country. He could probably muster delegations from half a dozen states within twenty-four hours of giving the signal. The farming west could easily be set alight in Lowden's interest. His boom was found by this writer to be glowing brightly in numerous sections in the Mississippi valley.

Ex-service men may determine to take a hand in Republican national politics in 1928. Their presidential timber includes Dwight F. Davis, of Missouri, secretary of war, and Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, assistant secretary of war. Each of them can undoubtedly take a favorite-son delegation to the next G. O. P. convention from his own state, if the political water looks fine enough to go into.

G. O. P. OPTIMISTIC

Strange as it may strike the casual observer, Republican leaders are extracting no little sunshine from events of November 2. The election is interpreted as holding out genuine encouragement for 1928. "Al" Smith is to blame for that. As Republicans figure it out, Governor Smith, by his double-barrelled victory in New York, has made himself so dominant a factor in Democratic councils that this time he and his friends will not be denied, as they were denied at Madison Square Garden in 1924. They will insist, it is calculated, on putting "Al" over, no matter if it rends the Democratic party from stem to stern. Republicans are confident that a Smith nomination will do exactly that. They welcome the prospect. They are convinced that any Republican of stature—even Coolidge, with the Massachusetts-Butler disaster on record—could overwhelm Smith as the nominee of a faction-torn Democratic party.

Just as the Republican presidential race now threatens to become a wide-open field, so does the ascendancy of "Al" Smith insure a hot Democratic free-for-all. For the most part, the Democratic contest will resolve itself into a bid for Smith's favor, in the event that he finds the nomination, after all, beyond his reach. The late elections make certain that Governor Donahay, of Ohio, and Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, will enter the fray. His new national prestige for some time has assured the entry of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri. The friends of Alben W. Barkley, Democratic senator-elect from Kentucky, are ready to groom him for first or second place on the next Democratic ticket.

These are the trends, Republican and Democratic, that the congressional elections of 1926 have set in motion. On their development, rather than the organization of the next house and senate, politicians' thoughts and energies will be bent till further notice.

CLAIM SETTLED IN FULL AS ACCIDENT SEQUEL IN COURTS

Application of George R. Wolfe, as administrator of the estate of Ernest Paul Wolfe, deceased, for authority to settle a claim for $10,000 damages against L. C. Aleshire, 1837 W. High St., Springfield, as full satisfaction for parties beneficially entitled to the claim, in connection with the death of Paul Wolfe, 18, has been granted in Probate Court.

Paul Wolfe lost his life in an auto accident at Jacoby's Hill on the Springfield and Xenia Pike June 17, 1926 for which Christopher Westmoreland, colored, Springfield, employee of Aleshire, was held responsible.

George Wolfe, as administrator of the estate, brought suit against Westmoreland's employer for $10,000, and the case is still pending in Common Pleas Court.

Westmoreland faced a threatened charge of manslaughter but was instead later released.

SEEKING DIVORCE

Charging infidelity, Samuel Morgan has brought suit for divorce from Arnetta Morgan in Common Pleas Court. The couple was married September 20, 1920. Plaintiff charges his wife now lives apart from him and refused to return.

EXECUTRIX, EXECUTOR NAMED

Della F. Patterson and Raymond C. Rittenour have been appointed executrix and executor, respectively, of the estate of Joseph H. Rittenour, deceased, in Probate Court. J. E. Lewis, Charles Rittenour and J. H. Lackey were named appraisers of the estate.

MARRIAGE LICENS

William Haines, 232 S. West St., Xenia, laborer, and Goldie May Tobin, 232 S. West St., Xenia, Rev. H. B. McEneaney.

CHEST COMMITTEE MEETS WEDNESDAY

Postmaster C. S. Frazer, chairman of the executive committee of Xenia's newly founded Community Chest, has called a meeting of the committee for Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at Frazer's Shoe Store when the goal for the chest campaign this month will be fixed.

Members of the committee will discuss the budgets of the Social Service League and Red Cross representing the estimated needs of these agencies to finance charitable work during the coming fiscal year. It is possible a date for the chest drive may also be set. Chairman Frazer discloses that regardless of what goal is set for the campaign, the drive will probably continue indefinitely until the full amount is subscribed.

one in the crowd of visitors smuggled in guns and, in the rush, passed the weapons to the prisoners. That all must be investigated.

VISITORS IN PANIC

The break came shortly after the 2 o'clock tour had been formed. Thirty-five visitors had paid their admission and were grouped in the big vestibule. As the first of the outsiders walked through the gate, the thirteen prisoners sprang to the gate. Visitors were hurled aside. Guard Captain Bennett fell, clubbed. Guard Callahan was attacked and fell before the onslaught. The rushing prisoners reached the street miraculously, according to the prison officials, escaping in a veritable rain of bullets.

Harold Nieringartner of Lima, a lifer, was shot through the head at the door.

Thomas Gerak, serving life for murder, was recaptured just outside the prison.

COMMANDEREED AUTO

Dashing across the street, nine of the men surrounded an automobile driven by Miss Eva Bursdale, threw her bodily from the car, climbed aboard and sped away. In this group were Charles Mitchoffer, Columbus, serving life for murder; James Johnson, Cuyahoga County, ten years for burglary; John Nieman, Hamilton County, fifteen years for shooting; Arthur Clayton, Cuyahoga County, fifteen years, shooting to wound; Robert Hunt, Cuyahoga County, life for murder; Frank Proctor, Hamilton County, ten years, burglary; Burton Carter, Darke County, twenty-five years, robbery; Frank Mills, Lucas County, ten years, robbery; George "Jiggs" Lostniener, Cuyahoga County, life for murder.

Johnson was captured near London. He had been slightly wounded by buckshot.

The other eight were surrounded in a cornfield by officials of London and Madison County and Columbus policemen. Hunt was wounded in the leg; Mitchoffer had three fingers shot off; Carter was shot through the shoulder. Proctor stood behind a shock of corn and emptied an automatic pistol at a policeman and then surrendered.

DEMANDS PROBE

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 9.—"Enough prisoners escape prosecution altogether without letting those who are sent to the penitentiary escape," declared Edward C. Stanton, prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga County, here today, announcing that he will demand investigation of Tuesday's break at Columbus. Stanton pointed out that the alleged ringleader of the plot, "Jiggs" Lostniener, and five other members of the band were former Cleveland crooks who, despite his most earnest efforts to keep them behind the bars, were being "good" by prison officials, he charged.

James P. Kirby, county probation officer, and other officials here joined in Stanton's request for the investigation, declaring that lax methods at penal institutions were responsible for the attempted jail delivery.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. adv.

CHARGE LAXITY

Kirby charged that in one state institution, armed inmates are used as guards over other prisoners and that officials resent all suggestions for bettering conditions.

Judge George P. Baer, who sentenced Lostniener, already has urged that the law be amended to make it a death penalty for murderers to attempt to escape.

HISTORY OF BLUES FEATURES BANDBOX REVUE NOVEMBER 16

The history of the blues, from their "birth" to the latest innovation of blues melody, will be one of the highlights in "The Bandbox Revue" to be presented at City Hall Theater, November 16 and 17. A complete blues act will be presented, introducing all types of "blues", vocal and instrumental.

Two skits that will intersperse the song and dance numbers of the "Revue" will contain material for an evening's entertainment alone. Characters in one will be taken by Mrs. Jane Bell, Miss Doris Whittington, Miss Alice Foley, Isadore and Arthur Hyman and Lawrence Riddell, and in the other by Miss Helen Ford, Mrs. Harry Williams, John Sutton, Omer Jenkins and "Bill" Horner.

A complete orchestra will be in the pit for the performance, the Harmony Kings furnishing high class accompaniment for the various numbers. Five main choruses featuring the show are hard at work on clever song and dance numbers.

"The Bandbox Revue" was written by Bob Owens and is being produced by Mr. Owens and Elwood

Smith, under auspices of the Knights of Pythias Lodge. Tickets can be obtained at the Criterion, Geyer Book Shop, Smith Bakery, K. of P. members, Pantry Grocery, Sohn's Drug Store or from any member of the cast. The plat will open Friday night at 6 o'clock at Sohn's Drug Store. The fifty cent admission fee includes reservations.

A Girl's Critical Age

READING between the lines, it takes a mother or sister to divine the needs of a girl just budding into womanhood: "My sister was not very strong and had been taking all sorts of pills and stuff for constipation. She was fourteen and of course embarrassed with pimples. So I bought her a large bottle of Syrup Pepsin. She has had no constipation since, her complexion is good and she is much stronger, healthier and happier. Now I always recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin." (Name and address will be sent on request.)

Has Brought Up Entire Families

Syrup Pepsin is a mainstay from infancy to full growth. Sour, bilious stomach, headache, coated tongue, colds, feverish daily ills—all vanish. Children play right after a dose. Mothers stop their own terrible sick headache, indigestion, constipation. Makes old folks happy, contented. Truly a family medicine in its highest meaning. Get it today—any druggist, anywhere. For a free trial bottle send name and address to Pepsin Syrup Company, Monticello, Illinois.

SARA M. CHEW MEETS

ON MONDAY EVENING

Members of the Sara M. Chew Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church enjoyed a delightful affair in the church parlors Monday evening when the annual thank-offering meeting was held. A delicious dinner was served at six thirty and following the dinner the regular program was given.

"Missionary Work Among the Indians," was the subject for the evening and Mrs. George Street, who conducted the devotionals, gave the twenty-third Psalm in the Indian sign language. Mrs. Helen Spahr, who has charge of the program, told of the work among the Indian and showed a chart giving the names and location of all of the Indian missions. A sketch of the work in each mission was given by different members of the Society.

Mrs. George Eckler gave an interesting report of the conference recently held at Marion and Mrs. George Street and Mrs. V. F. Brown also gave interesting points in connection with the conference. A vocal duet by Mrs. Leigh Bickett and Mrs. Homer Spahr was a feature of the program. The treasurer reported that the thank-offering amounted to thirty-five dollars. The names of four new members were reported to the Society.

FIRST M. E. GLEANERS

ENTERTAINED MONDAY

Members of the November committee proved faithful hostesses to forty-five members of the Gleaner Class, First M. E. Church, at the home of Mrs. Roy Ireland, N. King St., Monday evening. Election of officers was held. Mrs. V. L. Faires being elected president; Mrs. Roy Ireland, vice president; Mrs. H. C. Fender, secretary; Miss Clara Marshall, treasurer.

The approach of Armistice Day was brought out in the decorations and entertainment. An impressive little sketch was given with Mrs. Ireland representing a Red Cross nurse; Mrs. Carl Prammer, Uncle Sam; Mrs. Ralph Stevens, the navy; Mrs. Clayton Swartz, the army and Mrs. Clarence Patterson, the Goddess of Liberty.

Mrs. A. E. Faulkner followed with a reading. Two patriotic contests were enjoyed, concluding the program.

OLD TOWN COMMUNITY

CLUB ELECTION HELD

Mr. Ovard McCoy was elected president of the Old Town Literary Club, at the first meeting at Old Town School, Friday. Mr. Clark Linkhart was made vice president; Miss Hazel Linkhart, secretary and Mrs. J. W. Swadener, treasurer. Mrs. Wilbert, Mr. David Riley and Mrs. Zimmerman, are members of the new program committee; Mrs. Elbeck, Mrs. Betty and Mrs. Pank, refreshment committee; Miss Clara McCoy and Mr. Carl Harner, membership.

After the election of officers, an enjoyable evening was spent. Old time fiddlers, furnished the club with music and a playlet was given by three Harner boys. Refreshments were served consisting of gingerbread, cider, and pumpkin pie. The next meeting will be held November 26. Everyone is invited.

PLEASANT BIRTHDAY

PARTY GIVEN THURSDAY

Covers were laid for fourteen guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Upton Conner, Thursday evening, honoring their son, Mr. Harry Conner's twenty-fifth birthday. A bounteous three course supper was served. A cake bearing twenty-five pink candles formed an attractive center piece on the table. Mr. Conner who has been confined indoors for some time from illness, received many beautiful presents.

Those who enjoyed the affair were: Miss Rose Ellinger, Miss Esther Miller, Mr. Edward Miller, Mr. and Mrs. George Stantler, all of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Semler and daughter, Martha Jane and son, Chester, Jr., Mr. Chester Conner and Mr. Paul Ricker.

SOCIAL AND BUSINESS

MEETING AT MCKINLEY

One of the most delightful meetings of the year, under auspices of the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association, was held Monday afternoon at the school when officers and the membership committee, entertained honoring the teachers and the new members.

The membership chairman, Mrs. Richard McClellan, reported that there were 100 paid members in the association, more than twice the membership of a year ago. Mrs. E. P. Hamlin gave a graphic and detailed report of the state convention held at Marietta, O., recently.

Miss Dorothy Hamlin favored the meeting with a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Street at the piano.

City Superintendent H. C. Pennington addressed the mothers, on "The Educational System," giving details of the twelve-years' course. His talk was well received by the eighty-five women.

Owing to the resignation of Mrs. Clarence Hatfield, Mrs. L. S. Hyman, was elected secretary of the association. Announcement was made of the need of patronage at the Bijou Theater benefit of the association Friday evening, with a matinee and the Armistice Day Silver Tea of the Federated P. T. A., at the home of Mrs. Walter Harner, November 11. Plans were laid for filling Thanksgiving baskets for needy families.

After the program, the guests were asked to remain for a social hour and refreshments. Members of the association join in interest with other school patrons in the fact that W. P. Thompson, former president of the Ohio State University, paid high tribute to the late Edwin B. Cox (city superintendent of Xenia Schools in an address at the Central Ohio Teachers' Association convention in Columbus, last week.

All candidates for county office, whether defeated or elected, must file the expense statements within ten days after the election.

CANDIDATES FILE EXPENSE ACCOUNTS

Three additional candidates for county office at the November 2 election have complied with the law by filing their campaign expense accounts with Earl Short, clerk of the board of elections.

R. F. Thomas, re-elected county recorder, had no receipts but listed a contribution of $15 to the Greene County Republican Executive Committee.

George H. Creswell, unsuccessful candidate for county commissioner, and Frank M. Chambliss, coroner-elect, spent nothing and received no money in their campaigns.

All candidates for county office, whether defeated or elected, must file the expense statements within ten days after the election.

RECALL WITNESS IN

HALL-MILLS TRIAL

COURT HOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 9.—Edward Schwartz, fingerprint expert of the Newark police department, was recalled as the first witness today in the Hall-Mills murder trial.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 9.—Six telling blows have been delivered by the state to date in the baffling Hall-Mills murder trial.

It will be a week or ten days before the state will have finished presentation of its case against the wealthy Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her two brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, and not until that time will it be safe to predict whether or not the state's case is strong enough to warrant a conviction.

Thirty-odd witnesses for the state have been heard. About 100 had been subpoenaed. The defense plans to put fifty witnesses, including the three defendants, on the stand. It is conservatively estimated that the trial will last at least two weeks more.

Mrs. D. O. Shoup, Fairfield, underwent a tonsilectomy operation at the offices of local physicians, Tuesday morning.

Mr. Clinton Saunders, E. Second St., is improving after being confined in bed for several days.

APPROVE OFFICERS

OF NEW RAILROAD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Officers and directors of the new Chesapeake and Hocking railroad, to be constructed between Gregg and Valley Crossing, O., and which is expected to form eventually a link in the proposed Van Sweringen railroad merger, were approved today by the Interstate Commerce commission as follows:

Wm. J. Harahan, president; Henry Lohmeyer, assistant secretary; Wm. N. Cott, assistant treasurer; Wm. Michel, chief engineer; and O. P. Van Sweringen, George Cole Scott, Otto Miller, W. J. Loubdach, George T. Bishop and Wm. J. Harahan, directors.

THREE INJURED AS

AUTOS COLLIDE ON WILMINGTON PIKE

Mrs. Luther Starbuck, Mrs. Rorer Fudge and Miss Frances Oglesbee, all of near Wilmington, are suffering from severe cuts and bruises and narrowly missed serious injury or death, result of an automobile accident on the Xenia-Wilmington Pike, two miles north of Wilmington, Saturday afternoon.

The automobile in which they were riding was struck by a machine occupied by two young men and a young woman. Samuel W. Beach and Joseph Kimports, Antioch College students, and Miss Mildred Klein, of Norwood, were in the other car. Both cars were demolished.

The wreck occurred when the driver of the car occupied by the two men and the girl, attempted to assist the girl from the back seat to the front, while driving with one hand, it is said. He lost control of the car, causing a head-on collision with the car in which the three women were driving in the opposite direction.

Miss Oglesbee was cut about the face. Mrs. Fudge received cuts on her right arm and was severely bruised while Mrs. Starbuck had her foot injured and is walking with the aid of crutches since the accident.

Mrs. Starbuck, Mrs. Fudge and Miss Oglesbee were taken to Kelly Hale Hospital, Wilmington, for treatment. Occupants of the other car did not require medical attention.

WHEN HEADACHY

TAKE "CASCARETS" FOR THE BOWELS

To-night! Clean your bowels and end headaches, colds, sour stomach

Get a 10-cent box now. You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is clean, healthy, inside.

Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

ANTIOCH GIRLS TO

BALLOT ONCE MORE ON USE OF TOBACCO

Girl students of Antioch College are determined to find out what the majority of their number thinks about smoking.

Division A girls recently put the matter to vote by taking a secret ballot which was to be opened jointly when Division B girls returned to school and cast a similar vote on the question.

However, the ballots were phrased differently and the upshot of the resulting controversy is that a new ballot has been prepared, similar for both divisions, in which the fair ones will give their opinions yes or no on the question and also concerning smoking with limitations.

This solution of the ballot question met with approval of both divisions and Division B girls have already cast their secret ballot. Division A will follow suit when it returns to school November 15. The old ballots were thrown out.

All votes of both divisions will be counted at the same time, it is announced.

BURGLAR ROUTED BY

WOMAN WITH PISTOL

Mrs. Mary E. Matthews, according to police, frustrated what she believed was the intention of an unidentified colored man to break into her home on S. Whitman St., between 9 and 10 o'clock Monday night.

Police say Mrs. Matthews not only foiled the attempt but went further and completely routed the intruder by firing twice with a revolver when she saw him tumbling at a lower window.

ON COMING BACK

The little boy who kept hitting his head with a hammer explained on inquiry that he did it because he felt so good when he stopped. The little boy had the true philosophy of a vacationist.

About once a year we get a yearning to go away from wherever we are, to be different, to get out of our chosen path of life; and after much preparation and worry about where and how and when to go, we make the break and are gone.

And we are only away a little while when we begin to get restless; we have a new yearning, this time it is to get back, back to the comfortable routine of the years, back to the cozy bed with just the right size pillow, back to the easy chair of the front porch, back to the little nook in the scheme of things as they are; away from the half cooked yet burnt food of the woods, away from the mosquitoes of the summer cottage, away from the knock-kneed nudity of the beaches!

We have a feeling away down in the deep dim recesses of our soul that it's not the going away that helps, it's the coming back.

MOST PROSPEROUS OF ALL

Captain Robert Dollar, of the Dollar steamship lines, has just returned to San Francisco from his third trip around the world in three years. Of course, he does not have to pay for his transportation so it is easier for him to travel than it would be for the most of us. But he seems to make good use of his opportunity, and he brings back word from all along the line that the United States is the most prosperous country in the world. He says that England is in desperate straits, and he lays it principally to the payment of the debt, and to the effect of the coal miner's strike. France is flat on her back, economically, but he says he saw no American feeling as so many have reported. Egypt, he says, is enjoying about the same kind of progress as has characterized her for the past ten years, while Italy, under the control of Mussolini, according to this experienced observer, is in the best condition of any European country. One of the reasons for his success, Capt. Dollar says, is that he is big enough to hold the club over the Bolsheviks. In spite of the war in China, which leaders there declare has no end in sight, the national commerce has increased fifteen percent the past two years and the people are doing an increasing business. Rubber and tin prices have produced an era of good business in the Straits Settlements. In the Philippines, he says, it is not the common people who want independence, but only the politicians. However, Capt. Dollar says it is unjust to compare the conditions in the United States with those in other nations of the world. "Here everybody is happy, work is plentiful, everybody is working and we are all enjoying a grand era of prosperity. Other world nations, speaking generally, are not showing the progress and prosperity of this country, although I think there is a change for the better throughout the world," said he.

NOT FAIR TO MARINES

It is likely that the marines will do a good job of guarding the United States mails, now that they have been called to the task, but in the opinion of this paper their summons is to be regarded with mixed emotions. One of gratification that an agency which can act and will act has been called in to action, and another of regret that a willing horse should be unduly ridden, simply because of his willingness.

The responsibility of guarding the mails is on the civil and not the military forces. The marines are being asked to substitute for somebody who has fallen down on the job, and it hardly seems fair. Least of all does it seem fair to call one whose record of service is so complete as to performance, as is that of the marines.

Stories such as those coming from Chicago and Herrin, which tell of mobilization of armed gangs and the carrying on of crime as though it were the merest routine of legitimate business, do not tend to excuse the situation under which the marines have been ordered to safeguard the mails.

The substitution of the marines represents the taking over of a function of civil government by the military. If it is necessary in this case, how far will the necessity extend? Will Chicago repeat only the peace when the army marches in upon her? Will Herrin only furnish news of law and order, instead of the reverse, when rifle and bayonet and military challenge are established in control of her affairs?

Fundamentally, the mails are insecure because local law enforcement is insecure, court processes uncertain, punishment doubtful. Men who rob mails begin with lesser offenses, and public toleration passes up these lesser offenses.

The marines have a right to ask local self-government. "Why don't you tend to your own business?"

And that's something civil life is obligated to "tell the marines."

THE PROBLEM

Philosophers will search the great unknown

Seeking a thread of truth to them denied.

While life is rich with charms on every side,

With God, I think, they wish to stand alone,

To snatch, and claim His secrets for their own.

But here is beauty, stretching far and wide.

Here on the stream of life all mortals ride

Where every port of peace is plainly shown.
We come to earth to spend a few brief years.
We must remain until our task is complete.

Then which among us happiest appears.

The good man or the liar and the cheat?

This is our problem. Not what Heaven may give.

But how to find contentment while we live.

TO HEAR SPEAKER

DELAWARE, O., Nov. 9.—Prof. E. D. Dickinson of the law department of the University of Michigan, will speak to the Ohio Wesleyan University student body on December 2nd.

Alas Poor Yorick!

The Theatre

George Kelly, he of "The Show Off" and "Craig's Wife" has another character study on Broadway. Her name is "Daisy Mayme" and she is a kind, canny, ordinary little woman, not as good theatrical material as the Show Off himself, according to The New Yorker.

"She is too likable," The New Yorker continues. "Nor does one laugh with her, for while she is considered a 'scream' by her friends as a humorist, she is merely exactly as funny as a small town life-of-the-party is apt to be." At the same time The New Yorker grants "Daisy Mayme" the top of the comedy season, above every other play, except "Broadway."

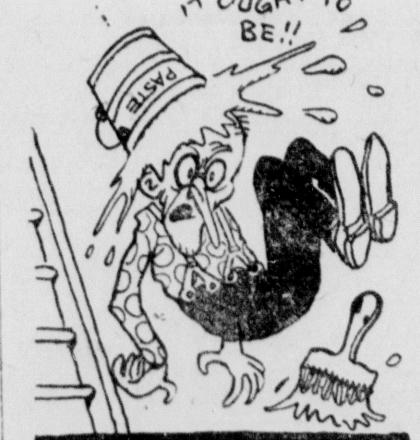

"Like all Mr. Kelly's characters, the people in 'Daisy Mayme' have many preoccupations. They quarrel and wheedle and love and worry. In fact, they live, and the most satisfying bits of comedy in the play are those which seem dropped inadvertently from Mr. Kelly's prodigious pen. Bits like that in which 'Laura Fenner,' the acid sister, tells her daughter to follow the silly sister upstairs and not leave her alone a minute or she'll start poking around." The New Yorker critic says, "Daisy Mayme" is the pageant of the possessive attitude of married sisters toward a prosperous brother, succeeding in promoting a marriage that might not have happened otherwise.

From notes left by Robert Browning, Arthur Goodrich and Rose A. Palmer have fashioned "Caponsacchi" for Walter Hampden on Broadway.

Cable dispatches from Paris received at the Shubert offices in New York state that when Mlle. Cecile Sorel, who is coming with the Comedie Francaise for a short season of French repertoire, commencing November 29, arrives on the next trip of the Berengaria, she will have her $50,000 worth of gown and "street" ensembles, said to be one of the most elaborate personal wardrobes ever to enter this country.

TUCUMSEH'S BIRTHPLACE
Tucumseh, the great Shawnee and Miami chief, was born, according to Benjamin Kelley, Tucumseh's adopted brother, who was five years in the Blackfish family, near Xenia on Mr. Sexton's lot near a spring. Mr. Thomas Hind, who makes the statement that Tucumseh was born on the Sexton farm, states as proof that in the year 1821 he met the Rev. Ben Kelley, then a Baptist minister, and who was taken prisoner the same time as Boone, and had it from his own lips that Kelley was five years in the Blackfish family.

It is said of Tucumseh that at the battle of Tippecanoe he had all the surviving Shawnees in the front ranks for he considered them the bravest of all his men.

EAGLES INITIATE CLASS ARMISTICE DAY WITH PROGRAM

Acting upon a request of M. O. Burns, grand worthy president of the Ohio Fraternal Order of Eagles, Xenia Aerie, No. 1689, will initiate an Armistice Day class of candidates Sunday, November 14 at 2:30 o'clock, it is announced by Secretary Otto Hornick.

A banquet will be served at 5:30 p. m., after which Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy will deliver an Armistice Day address.

The Sunday program will be similar to that which will be carried out by all subordinate Aeries throughout the United States. The F. O. E. has a splendid war record, having had more than 47,000 members in the army service during the late war. In addition Xenia Aerie claims the distinction of sending more members to the army, considering the size of the local membership, than any other Aerie in the country.

Officers of the order ask each member who has obtained an applicant for the Armistice Day class, to turn in the application by Friday night, November 12.

East Side - West Side

OF New York

By Jack O'Donnell

The Jolly Roger, that black emblem of piracy, is, figuratively speaking, flying from the mast heads of many crafts in New York Harbor.

Here, where merchantmen, from the Seven Seas come to dispose of their precious cargoes, numerous bands of port pirates have a profitable field. They are less picturesque than their ancient brothers, but equally remorseful. Their raids upon the enormous wealth scattered about the harbor take ever changing forms and the warfare between them and the police is waged without armistice.

Much of the harbor piracy is carried on through collusion with crews of ships or dock guards. One of the pirates will get a job on a merchant ship in some foreign port. Arrived in New York Harbor he will communicate with his confederates through a system of signals, advising them when an opportune time comes to make their raid. Having fast gasoline launches the port pirates can work rapidly. They swoop down upon the "prize" unload thousands of dollars worth of valuables and make their escape before the ever vigilant harbor police can come to drive them off.

This winter, when the high price of coal has made the coal-laden barges especially tempting to the modern Captain Kidds have reaped a harvest. Often three or four of these barges are towed about the upper bay just off the Battery by a single tug boat, which of necessity goes far in advance of its tow. The pirates board the last of these barges, unload many tons of "black diamonds" and make their get-away before the crew of the tugboat is aware of the marauders' presence.

It often happens that a single liner will unload millions of dollars worth of portable packages on the docks. If a buccaneer boarded that ship in some foreign port you may be sure he signals his confederates the right moment to make their raid.

The main obstacle that stands between the pirates and the police is the junkmen. These go about the harbor in boats of various sizes and types, or drive large drays, or shove push carts along the piers. They buy from the pirates and in turn sell to the fences about New York who deal in stolen goods.

Who said Long John Silver was but a creature of R. L. S.'s brain? There's a wholesale and retail meat market on Third Avenue, the chief patrons of which are brokers and bond salesmen who live in Westchester, New York's choicest residential section.

Every evening one may see a line of these wealthy and near-wealthy Westchesterites leaving the market with heavy packages containing a week's supply of meat.

Why do they shop here? Because the meat is fresh and the prices twenty-five to thirty-five per cent lower than in the meat shops of New Rochelle, Larchmont or Rye.

I met Lowell Thomas, the famous traveler and lecturer, at a club shindig recently and he told me he was leaving soon for a trip to the Arctic circle to gather material, pictures and color for more of his lectures.

"Pretty dangerous business, isn't it?" I asked.

"Not as bad as crossing Broadway after the theatre," he answered.

And, remembering a taxicab that had chased me right up on to the sidewalk in front of the Astor Hotel that very night, I agreed with him.

Today's Talk

A BEAUTIFUL FACE

I sat in a hotel lobby in New England just watching and studying folks. This was in a Boston hotel.

The people in Boston are interesting folks. They have Boston personality exactly as you will find that folks in San Francisco or Dallas, Texas, also have a personality all their own.

Well, I sat watching the people come and go in this Boston hotel lobby. A chap sat in a big cushioned chair smoking a cigarette. I wondered what he was thinking about. A strange little couple came in and looked around and then met some friends and they kissed all around. A Japanese traveler rushed in with his camera across his shoulder and a handful of grips. A young girl sat reading a novel. Men stood at the news stand throwing dice for cigars. The manager of the hotel walked across the lobby and gave orders to have the front door closed. People kept lining up to register for the night.

All very ordinary—quite the same as in any hotel any day. But all of a sudden an elderly lady supported by a younger woman walked into the hotel. The elderly lady had one of the most unusual smiles on her face of any I had seen in months. I can still see it, so vividly did it impress its beauty upon my brain.

It wasn't just a smile, it was a face radiant, in full beauty—

bloom. You could feel the magnetism of the personality behind that beautiful face.

All the rest of the evening, and far into the night, before sleep came, did I feel the influence of that lovely face.

I saw youthful faces of young women pass all evening. Many were very good to look at. But beyond the passing beauty, nothing remained. But here was an elderly lady whose wonderful face remains as something real and vital, weeks after I saw it.

It was the face of a mother. The face of one who had undoubtedly suffered deeply. But I noted that there was a peculiar silence of reverence as the race passed by. Such a beautiful race.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE OBSERVED HERE

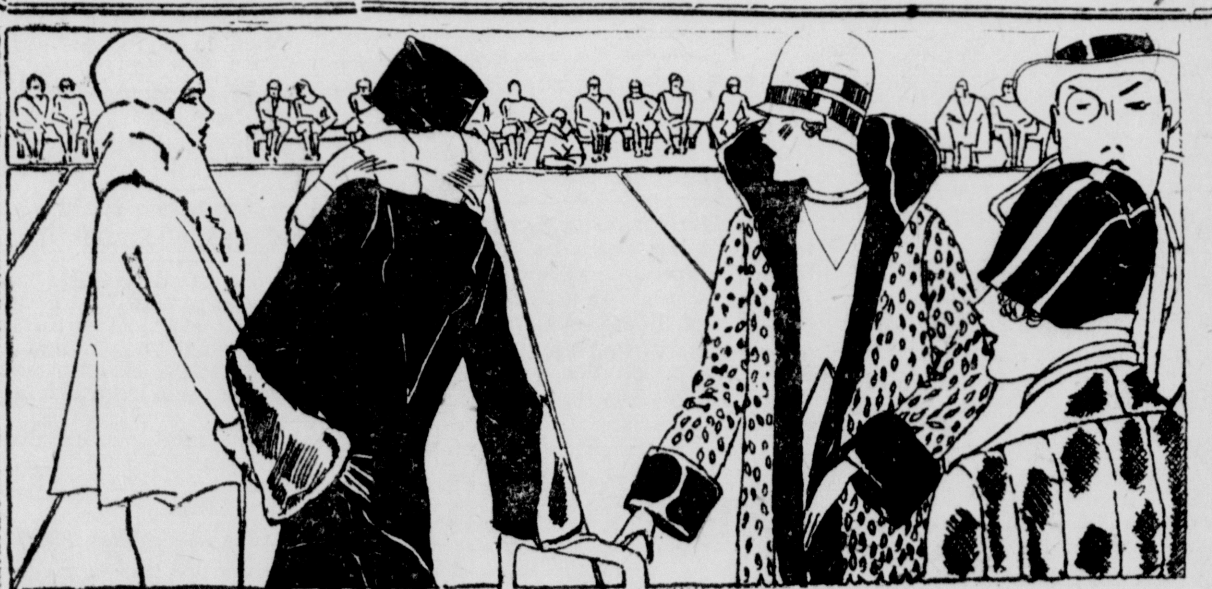

An "Armistice Day" program has been arranged for the student body of Central High School at assembly period Thursday afternoon, November 11 at 1:30 o'clock, according to Principal Spencer Shank.

The Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of First M. E. Church, has consented to address students on a subject in keeping with the occasion. Preliminary exercises will precede the Rev. Mr. Shank's talk.

NOT A VERY EXCITING GAME

Jay V. Jay

The Goofy—he has done this often!—is waiting for Mitzi. Technically he is waiting for Mitzi and Polly and Eleanor, but why be technical? He finds very little to interest him in the fair young things near him—cape coats, wide sleeves, reversible coats notwithstanding. You, yourself, will probably notice that these are smart garments—the first coat is of fabric with a fur collar, the second of seal trimmed with nutria, the third a leopard coat trimmed with seal. End of the first quarter and they haven't come yet!

At the second half the Goofy decided to wait no longer and following up his ticket found the three young ladies—all very reproachable because he is so late. Polly's coat is trimmed with a long collar of fox and wide fox cuffs. Mitzi wears a muskrat coat with a standing collar to keep her ears warm. Eleanor has a seal coat outlined in fabric with a tailored sort of collar. (Hidden by the collar of her dress). "Never mind," Mitzi tells the Goofy. "It hasn't been very exciting. Second half and the score is 0 to 0."

CENTRAL GRIDDERS TO ENGAGE BATH TWP. TEAM HERE FRIDAY

Central High School grid from huskies will rekindle the fires of old rivalry with Bath Twp. High School's eleven from Osborn in one of the closing games of the season, Friday afternoon at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Play will begin at 2:30 o'clock with Dr. Dave Reese, Dayton, always a favorite with Xenia fans, officiating.

Defeated by one insignificant touchdown in their past two games, Central footballers are grimly determined Osborn shall be made a victim Friday.

It will be a fighting, determined

Xenia eleven that takes the field this week which omens ill fortune for the Osborn hopefuls.

Coach Kolb is admonishing his charges the necessity of winning by any old score as nothing but a victory will satisfy the local squad.

Although Central seems destined to triumph Friday it will be no easy task as Osborn's burly line and fast-stepping backfield bids fair to be troublesome.

In fact Central should be satisfied to win in the words of the coach "by any old score."

Xenia is looking beyond the Bath contest and into the future, for the closing game with Wilmington High school looms as the only barrier to what will be an unusually successful year.

Osborn replaces Urbana on Xenia's schedule this week because the latter school was forced to cancel two weeks ago. It is understood Urbana, through a misunderstanding, scheduled two games for the same date, which is reminiscent of another year in the past when a similar occurrence happened during the basketball season.

WILL REVIVE LEAD AND SILVER MINING IN SOUTH DAKOTA

HOT SPRINGS, S. D., Nov. 9.—Revival of mining in the Black Hills, which has been forecast by several movements in mining circles during the past year, are centering in action which has taken place recently.

The shaft of the Spokane mine Keystone is now down to the 300 foot station and cross-cutting of the ledge has been begun. The mine is to be developed for lead and silver and is backed by substantial capital.

An unconfirmed report is to the effect that one of the largest mining companies in the United States has acquired property in the Keystone belt and will start a diamond drill at work prospecting within a short time.

GOVERNOR URGING PERIOD OF SILENCE

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Governor Vic Donahey today called upon the citizenry of Ohio to pay tribute to the World-war dead and to "the heroes who returned and are celebrating this Armistice Day with us," in a proclamation declaring next Thursday, Nov. 11, a half holiday.

"As a part of our observation of the day, let us pause in silence and meditation in our daily toll at 11 a. m." the proclamation read.

The proclamation urged schools, fraternal societies and civic bodies to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies.

RETURN OF ALLEGED THIEF IS SOUGHT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Governor Donahey today issued a requisition upon the governor of New Jersey for the return to Lucas County of William Owens, alias Hugh Owens, who, according to the request, the requisition is wanted in Toledo for stealing 216 diamonds, valued at $50,000, that were "the personal property of the New York Central railroad."

Owens is under arrest at Freehold, N. J.

TRUSTEES FOR COUNTY DISTRICT LIBRARY HAVE BEEN APPOINTED

County Commissioners and Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy are announcing their original appointments on the board of trustees for the Greene County District Library, created by popular vote of the people at the November 2 election.

Commissioners have appointed Mrs. P. H. Flynn, Xenia, for the five-year term, Mrs. L. H. Jones, Yellow Springs, for three years

ADMIRAL ENEMY OF BILLBOARDS

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 9.—Samuel McGowan, retired paymaster-general of the United States navy, with rank of rear admiral and former chief highway commissioner of South Carolina, has a pet aversion. Billboards.

The admiral is devoting himself now to the fight to clear them from the countryside. He was one of the chief factors in the adoption of an order eliminating all bill boards and advertising signs from the right-of-way of the South Carolina highway system, with the exception of legitimate markers.

"Why in the name of common sense is it necessary to stick up a lot of huge signboards along a public road that the people have paid for and have a right to enjoy without being compelled to read advertisements for Simeon Whittepoof's Sovereign Specific for Lazy Liver?" inquires the admiral, explosively.

"What would you do if somebody were to keep sticking a hand-bill in your face as you walked up the prettiest street in town? You'd sock him on the jaw and be perfectly justified in the socking."

"Another thing, when you are driving an automobile you should keep your attention on the road or sad consequences may result. The more attractive a roadside billboard sign, the more danger that some motorist's attention will be distracted and an accident occur."

When You Feel a Cold Coming On Take Laxative BROMO QUININE Tablets to work off the Cold and to fortify the system against an attack of Grip or Influenza. A Safe and Proven Remedy. The box bears the signature of E. W. Grove, 30c.

Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will meet Tuesday night at 7:30 at Central High School. Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury announces the troop will lay plans for a patrol contest for the coming month based on attendance in uniform and prompt payment of dues at each meeting. For performance of each duty, individual Scouts will be credited with one point.

Following Scouts will be given their 1927 registration cards at the Tuesday session: Frederick Clark, Charles McNamee, Donald Arment, Edwin Bath, Laurence Eyer, Merton Linberger, Irwin Hyman, David Hamlin and Robert Crawford.

Other Scouts who have not registered for next year are expected to make up this deficiency as soon as possible as the Scoutmaster wishes to close the matter up at once.

Friday night a group representing both Xenia Scout troops witnessed the Dayton Council's Court of Honor exercises at Oakwood High School in Dayton. All advancements in Scouting were acknowledged before a large audience of Scouts, their parents and others interested in the work.

Attendance was estimated at 700.

SOME WOMEN ALWAYS ATTRACT

You want to be beautiful. You want the tireless energy, fresh complexion and pep of youth. Then let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets keep your system free from the poisons caused by clogged bowels and torpid liver.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

BACK TO THE FARM

The farm is being dressed up in the skirts of winter. The fodder shock has been given a berth under the barn roof. Pumpkins lay in heaping piles near the mangers of the cow stables, ready to be sliced with a corn knife. The turkey gobler struts proudly about, unaware of his doom.

Binders and mowers are stored in out-of-the-way places useless until another harvest. The hay fork is pulled up lashed taut to the rafters. Sparrows are making their beds in the hay mow. The hired man is receiving bright colored circulars from fur buyers and gazes intently at the latest quotations for skunk and mink. The collie is no longer making his evening stroll to bring home the Herefords. The farmer is forever doing chores.

Days are short. The twilight comes early and deepens quickly into the night. The evening milking is done by the soft glow of a coal oil lantern, hung on a nail in the stable. The supper table is centered by a flickering kerosene lamp.

Then comes the chicken hunt! Roosters and hens that have been sleeping out all summer on limbs of trees are put to bed on proper roosts in the hen house. Cackling and kicking, they are carried away, for winter is at hand and their outside roosts may be covered with snow any night. Then when the wood in the grate begins to pop and throw sparks out on the carpet, the kids get out the corn popper and prepare an evening treat.

It is the time of mince pies and cranberry sauce. The day for cider and fresh spare ribs. The season for sausage stuffing and chestnut hunting. Hail to the gold and crimson of November!

WHO REMEMBERS THIS ONE?

In the barn a little mouse
Ran to and fro
'Till one day it met a kitten,
Now it doesn't go.

It is rumored that Queen Marie's husband wired her to come home and that she paid no attention to his summons, which might lead one to believe that in addition to wearing crown and jewels she also wears the trousers in the royal family so to speak.

Well, Thanksgiving will soon be here. You can be thankful that you don't have to read this column.

HELEN THORNE $50,000 DAMAGE SUIT LOST IN FEDERAL COURT

An instructed verdict in favor of the defendant was rendered by a federal court jury which heard the $50,000 damage suit of Helen Thorne, as administratrix of the estate of Floyd Thorne, deceased, against The Pennsylvania Railroad
Co., at Dayton Monday afternoon.
Decision favoring the railroad came upon instructions of Federal Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

Helen Thorne brought the damage suit in Greene County Common Pleas Court more than a year ago as a result of the death of her husband, who lost his life when the truck he was driving was demolished by a Pennsylvania freight train at the company's crossing at Selma, O.

The railroad was charged with responsibility for the grade crossing.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO CHARGES BLAMED FOR AUTO ACCIDENT

As a formality binding him to a promise to pay for the damage,
Amos Baumbaster, 1641 E. Fifth St.,
Dayton, was charged with careless driving and failure to stop after an accident Monday, in connection with a head-on automobile collision on the Dayton Pike Sunday in which Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hamma and children, Louise and Gloria, Yellow Springs, were injured.

Appearing before J. E. Jones, justice of the peace, Baumbaster pleaded not guilty to both charges and his hearing was set for Saturday morning. Total bond was fixed at $1,000 but he was released and the charges will not be pressed if he pays for damage to the Hamma auto, amounting to about $115.

Baumbaster disappeared after creating the collision when he ducked out from a string of cars proceeding toward Dayton and crashed head-on into the Hamma machine causing both autos to go into a ditch.

He was identified Monday by authorities who traced him through the auto license number and voluntarily appeared in court upon notification.

MOTHER BLAMES HERSELF FOR ESCAPADE OF HER DAUGHTER

Vashti Dale, Noted Authoress, Tells Story As Warning For Other American Parents—This Is Second Installment

While Vashti Dale (Mrs. Charles Nichols) of Rock Island, Ill., was writing advice for other mothers on how to raise their children, her own daughter, over night, became the famous bobbed-haired "bandit" of Rock Island. Of course Beulah isn't a bandit.

Her daughter, Beulah, 16, made bold by hooch, broke into a residence, entered the bedroom of a 75-year-old man, stripped off her clothing, dressed herself in male attire, and started out to see the world—as a man. She was arrested in another city, brought back, and paroled to her mother.

Now Vashti Dale, who for many years has been a contributor to magazines and newspapers, has another view of motherhood.

This is the second installment of her story, written for EFS and The Daily Gazette. By VASHTI DALE

Copyright, 1926 (EFS)

The fathers and mothers of today are not in sympathy with the jazz-mad, liquor-drinking, flapperism and sheikism ideals of our modern youth; and because they are not, they inevitably do one of two things: condemn with uncompromising sternness any and all tendencies of the sort, wherever and whenever encountered, or blindfold themselves with the belief that their own children do not hold such ideals.

In either case they make no attempt to understand the cause back of them. This does not mean that I approve of, or condemn the hooch-drinking, joyriding, party-petting standards, which represent, to an appalling degree, the idea of a good time that is held by the average young man and young woman of today.

Parental Attitude. Nor does it mean that I approve of the attitude of the average parent who deliberately refuses to use common sense and understanding in dealing with the problem.

There is a cause for such "ideals" and it is your job and my job to find out what causes, and remove it.

Can it be removed? It can—provided we are not too wilfully blind to wake up and shoulder the responsibility which rightfully belongs to us.

This is a fast moving age and our children are part and parcel of it; and if we insist on walking the lock-step of a past century we cannot hope to cope with, much less understand, the thing that confronts us.

No Hypothetical Theory. I have said that I am not depending on any hypothetical theory for my facts and I am NOT, as I shall prove. Listen:

Sensational "news" of the daring hold up by Beulah Nichols, "bobbed-haired bandit," was flashed all over the country, and articles under glaring headlines appeared in all the leading dailies. But the scenes that were enacted away from the public eyes, are not known; and it is from these, in their close relationship to what is known, that I shall draw facts.

Why did Beulah Nichols play the part of bandit, don men's clothing and run away from home?

The answer is: First—Because she was drunk.

Second—Because she feared that if we, her parents, found her in such a condition she would be allowed but small personal liberty in the future.

And third—Because she was frightened and ashamed and in no condition to reason clearly.

Now, whose fault was it that Beulah became drunk, ran away from home and got herself featured as a daring bandit?

Are There Model Daughters? And—whose fault would it be if YOUR DAUGHTER did the same thing?

"Oh, but," you protest, "my daughter would never do such a thing; she has had too careful training. She is not that kind of a girl; and, there is a wide difference between my daughter and your daughter."

Stop, please! There is no difference at all between my daughter and your daughter, except the inevitable difference of temperament and possibly of personality.

Right here is where you are blinding yourself, as thousands of parents are blinding themselves today.

I once thought my daughter could not do such a thing. I once thought she had had too careful training, and that she was different from other girls.

Important Thing Overlooked. And—I overlooked, as you are overlooking, that one great, big fundamental fact—the fact that Beulah was, is and will remain so for a number of years—J U S T Y O U T H, in whom the Creator has placed a divine urge which may be used as a constructive energy, or as destructive recklessness.

And, if we, the parents, fail to recognize this fact in time, we will pay, and in some instances keep on paying.

Don't you remember the headlong, chaotic urges of your own youth? Were you ever inclined to consider consequences?

Did you not, in your inmost heart cry out: give me life and more life, for I am young and can enjoy, and I want my measure full and running over?

You surely remember these longings. "But," you say, "I never wanted to do the things which the youth of today wants, and does do. My parents would have driven me from home if I had."

Time Changes. True, but time passes, and what changes take place. It is our duty to remove a cause that is distorting into evil the ideals of our present age; and it is our duty to apply with fearless hand the X-ray of self-analysis and acknowledge our own shortcomings.

And if we, as parents, would eliminate a menace that is threatening to become a world-tragedy, we must be willing to do our full share.

In her third article, Miss Dale explains how, in her opinion, this may best be accomplished. Read it in tomorrow's Daily Gazette.

HONEY LOU

by Beatrice Burton
author of "LOVE BOUND" and "HER MAN" ETC.

© JOHNSON FEATURES INC., 1926

READ THIS FIRST:

HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary of old "GRUMPY" WALLACK, head of the Wallack Fabric Mills.

"Grumpy" hired Honey Lou not only because she is quick and clever, but because she is pleasant to have around, so he says. Every one at the place likes Honey Lou, from ANN LUDLOW, the shipping clerk, to JOE MEADOWS, the shipper. But Honey Lou is half afraid of Joe Meadows, without exactly knowing why.

Young JACK WALLACK comes to work in his father's mills, to learn the business "from the ground floor up." He falls in love with Honey Lou as soon as he sees her, and she with him. But when he asks her to meet him in a street-corner, Honey Lou flatly refuses to do it. And when he drives her home one night and kisses her, Honey Lou slaps his face and gets out of the car. Later he apologizes and they become good friends.

Later, when he meets Honey Lou's gentle well-bred mother and her half-sister, MARGRET MOODY, he realized that she has been reared as carefully as any of the girls of his own world outside the mills. One night Honey Lou meets one of his friends, ANGELA CLEMENS, who lives next door to the Wallack family. She feels sure that Angela, whose nickname is "Angel," is in love with Jack, and she is surprised when she asks her to dinner at her house, to celebrate Jack's birthday.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

Most of us are painfully shy about meeting new people, whether we confess it or not.

And Honey Lou Huntley felt exactly as if she were stepping into a cage of lions as she walked across the big, bright, beautiful room that Saturday night.

"Don't let these people ritz you!" she kept saying to herself. "Keep a stiff upper lip, old girl!"

She did keep it stiff. She even managed her wide and sunny smile. But hidden in the folds of her pink home-made dress her hands were like lumps of ice.

There were only three people on the sofa in front of the open fireplace—two men, with a girl between them. She was a little, dark, slender girl, all in bright Chinese red. The cigarette holder between her teeth was bright red, too, and so were her lips. She looked like a half-grown flapper, and Honey Lou was surprised when Angela Allen called her "Mrs. Clemens."

The men stood up to be introduced. The tall, sleepy-looking one was named Landedon, and Angela introduced the other as "Donegal." He was not much taller than Honey Lou, herself. He had reckless Irish eyes and a small, black tooth-brush of a mustache. Dapper and devil-may-care. That was Honey Lou's first impression of Timothy Donegal.

"Have a gasper?" he asked, when Honey Lou was sitting beside him on the deep-cushioned sofa. He held out his cigarette case, and she took one.

"Mrs. Clemens' leaned forward. "Don't light it, Miss Huntley," she begged in a high little voice, "or we'll have to sit here and watch you smoke it, and we're just dying to eat." She looked up at Angela Allen. "If somebody doesn't give me some food in a minute, I'll get right down and chew up the rug. I swear I will."

"Begin on this one, then!" the man named Donegal cut in with a laugh. He picked up a little Turkish paper-rug from the floor at his feet and tossed it at Mrs. Clemens. It just missed her head. She stooped and threw it back to him.

"Dern your hide, Tim Donegal!" she shrieked like a cockatoo, "what are you trying to do, break my face for me?"

Honey Lou gave an inward gasp. Why, this girl was as common as One-Armed Annie at the Wallack mills! Her slang was the same rough-and-ready slang as Ann's, and her face was painted just as Ann's always was, like an Easter egg. Strong perfume came from her clothes, too, when she moved, just as it came from Ann's—in clouds.

"I guess we're all sisters under the skin, after all," she thought comfortably, looking around her.

Then her eyes fell on Angela Allen.

She was different. There was no doubt of it. She wore no paint and Honey Lou made up her mind that she did not have so much as a dusting of powder on her clear white skin. In a year when everybody else went shingled and clipped to the ears, Angela Allen wore her pale gold hair in a soft roll at the base of her head.

She did not smoke. And she sat smiling in her tall chair, looking more like a saint than ever. "I wonder if she really is as good as she looks," Honey Lou said to herself.

A housemaid came into the room with a great silver tray filled with little glasses.

Honey Lou took one of the little glasses and looked down at the pale-orange liquid that sparkled in it.

"What is it?" she asked Tim Donegal, who sat close to her.

He gave her a queer, amused look. "Don't you know?" he asked. "Is it a cocktail?" asked Honey Lou, who had heard of them, but never tasted one.

"Oh, no," he answered, "it couldn't possibly be a cocktail. It must be orange juice. Beautiful, but dumb."

Honey Lou lifted it to her nostrils. It certainly smelled like orangeade. Or fruit punch. "Drink it," said the gay voice beside her. "It'll pep up your appetite."

She drank it. She drank it all. They went into the dining room. The table was aglow with candle light in the middle of a big shadowy room.

Honey Lou had never seen a table like it. Down the center of it was a row of pale-green glass bowls. They stood on a long narrow mirror, and the flowers in them were reflected in the glass. "And many a garden by the water flows," she murmured softly to Jack Wallack, as he held her chair for her.

She knew that it was a line of poetry from something she knew—but she couldn't remember what. Her head was going around and around and she seemed to see the room and the people in it through a golden veil. Her eyes were turned to Jack Wallack, were large and luminous in her flushed face.

"I'm as dizzy as an electric fan," she said huskily to him. "Was there anything in that fruit punch we had?"

As if it came from a long way off, she heard his voice: "That wasn't fruit punch. That was a cocktail, and a mighty strong one. I thought you never drank."

Honey Lou shook her head. "I never do," she answered weakly. "I never do." She picked up her soup spoon. It felt very heavy in her hand.

After a long time, Jack spoke to her again:

"You know, Honey Lou, one reason why I'm so strong for you is that you are so decent," he said, and his eyes were serious as he looked at her. "Because on don't drink—"

"Don't believe anything he says to you, Miss Huntley," piped up Mrs. Clemens from the other side of the table. "Jack pulls an awfully strong line of bunk. But it doesn't mean anything."

"Shut up, Suzanne," the sleepy-looking man, who sat beside her, said. "Talk to me and leave Romeo and Juliet alone."

Jokes flew back and forth across the table, and easy laughter. Suzanne Clemens got up, while the soup plates were being taken away, and went into a Charleston trance on the polished floor between the dining room and the living room.

The sleepy-looking man sang "All God's children got-a shoes," in a sleepy crooning voice.

Tim Donegal gave an imitation of a ventriloquist.

Honey Lou sat back and watched

it all with eyes that were sparkling and wistful. All this seemed very far away from her desk and her job down at the Wallack mills. Very far away from the flat and mother and Margaret. She could hardly believe that she was here in this great house, among Jack Wallack's friends—a stranger in a strange land. She looked up at him, and saw that he was looking at her. "I wish we were out of this," he was saying, so low that no one but she could hear him. "I wish we were alone somewhere. Don't you?"

Her eyes half closed drowsily as she nodded her head at him.

After the meal was over she and Tim Donegal started the radio in the sunroom while the other four played cards before the fire.

Honey Lou did not know how to play bridge. She had never so much as touched a playing card in her life.

"Old Jack thought he was going to have you all to his lonesome," Donegal told her with a chuckle, when they were settling in big wicker chairs and the music was all around them. "But Angel jockeyed him into the card game—and old Jack likes cards about the way I like work."

Honey Lou smiled at him lazily. Her head was still swimming. She closed her eyes. When she opened them again, Angela was in the sunroom. She was holding another tray of little glasses in her hands.

"Have one?" she asked Honey Lou.

Honey Lou shook her head. "No, thanks, they go to my head," she said. "I'm not used to them."

Angela shrugged her shoulders. "There are mild. They wouldn't hurt a baby," she said. "Take one."

Honey Lou didn't know how to get out of it. So she took one of the little glasses and drained it.

Presently the room began to rock like a ship in a storm. The radio music began to beat in Honey Lou's ear like the sound of a great drum.

She felt sick and hot. She tried to get out of her chair, to go to a window and open it. But she sank back, too sick and faint and dizzy to move.

Then, above the singing in her ears, she heard Angela Allen's voice. It was close at hand.

"Are you sick? Do you want to lie down?" she was asking. And Honey Lou tried to say "Yes."

But she couldn't. She felt as if she were slipping down—down—into windy darkness. After an eternity she heard another voice, a low, deep, man's voice—Jack Wallack's.

"What's happened to her, Angel?" it asked.

Then complete silence closed down over Honey Lou. She had, as Suzanne Clemens said, "passed gloriously out of the picture."

And so she did not hear Angela's soft answer.

"Please take her home, Jack," she said, looking at him with her gentle dove-colored eyes. "She's had too much to drink. She must have had seven or eight cocktails, your hard-boiled little friend. I lost count of them after a while."

"She didn't know what they'd do to her. She thought they were fruit punch, poor little kid," Jack answered.

But Angela shook her head with its halo of pale gold hair. "I told her they were cocktails," she said clearly.

Jack looked at her narrowly. Her eyes were wide and innocent—and he had never known Angela to tell a lie. And so he believed her. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Did Jack believe "Angel" Allen? The answer to that question is in tomorrow's chapter of "Honey Lou."
